Student Trustee gains new rights

By KATHY DAVIS

In a historic decision, the Student Trustee was granted "the privilege to make and second motions" for a period of one year by a 3-2 vote at the Foothill-De Anza Community College District Board of Trustees meeting on Monday, June 4.

The move was spearheaded by Student Trustee Bruce Jett, Foothill Student Body President Leslie Fay and Duane Rutledge, Foothill council member.

Trustees Mary Wheat, Alfred Chasuk and Ray Bacchetti who made the motion, all indicated that they favored the motion as a means to support the spirit and reward the excellence of the students of the Foothill-De Anza District. "They [the students] deserve to be more active participants," Wheat said.

Gerald Besson and R.C. Smithwick opposed the motion on the grounds that only trustees elected by the District's electorate should be able to make and second motions. Smithwick commented that Student Trustees only serve for one year and are not in a position to follow through and monitor the consequences of actions taken by the Board of Trustees.

"This is a real bad idea for real good reasons," said Chancellor Thomas Fryer, who is not a voting member of the Board. Students should not be able to do anything which the Faculty Senate President or he himself can not do, Fryer stated. As it became clear that the motion would pass, Fryer said he would do all he could to see that it worked.

The new policy will allow the Student Trustee to not only place items on the agenda, but also to present motions and second motions at Board meetings. Wheat said that the Student Trustee could accomplish the same things without the right to make and second motions by petitioning other Board members to present Student Trustee motions, "but the perception of power is what's important." The Student Trustee will still be unable to vote.

This issue was brought up last year by then Student Trustee Natasha Nicholson. The movement lost by a 3-2 vote. Since then, Board member Franklin Johnson has retired and has now been replaced by Bacchetti whose vote resulted in last night's victory for students.

All the trustees spoke of the dedication and excellence of Jett and the Student Trustees who have served since 1979 when Shirley Shepard, first Student Trustee to the Foothill-De Anza District, took office. Since that time it has become law in the state of California that Community College District Boards have one Student Trustee.

The Board also heard from three De Anza instructors who have just published a computer-aided speed reading program, two students in the Auto Technology Program at De Anza who won the regional Plymouth trouble shooting competition, and Foothill instructor Mary Jane Moffat who introduced the editors of a newly published student collection of autobiographies titled "Harvest of the Years."

Power failure hits Campus

By JOHN RADEBOLD

At exactly 2:01 p.m. Monday, June 4, Foothill College — and more than 1,500 residential homes in Los Altos and Los Altos Hills — lost all electrical power.

The outage lasted exactly 58 minutes and affected every building on Campus, Foothill's phone system and Foothill's non-commercial radio station, KFJC (89.7 FM).

The power loss occurred due to a "mechanical failure" in a PG&E circuit, according to Bill Leonard, public information representative for PG&E.

The malfunctioning circuit was located near Summer Hill and Valley View roads in Los Altos, Leonard said, adding, "By 3 p.m. all but 220 homes had their power restored." Leonard said all had service restored by 6 p.m. Monday.

Plant Services Manager Bill Johnson said, "Everything's restored to normal and we're doing just fine." Johnson also said Foothill has no back-up generator.

Commencement June 14

600 to receive degrees

Dr. Gerald C. Hayward, chancellor of the California Community Colleges, will address Foothill College graduates at the College's 25th annual commencement ceremony at 4 p.m., Thursday, June 14, in the Foothill Theatre.

Hayward will speak on "Community Colleges in the Age of the Parenthesis."

Nearly 600 students will receive Associate in Arts and Associate in Science Degrees, including many recipients of scholarships and special awards from the College and from Bay Area business and service organizations.

Hayward has been chancellor of the community college system since 1980.

He previously was director of government and public affairs in the Chancellor's Office and served the California Legislature as consultant to the Senate Committees on Education and Finance.

Foothill President Thomas H. Clements will greet the graduates and will give the invocation.

Pianist Elizabeth Barkley will play for the processional and the Foothill Choir, directed by Nile Norton, will perform.

A reception for graduates, their guests and the Foothill faculty will follow the ceremony in the Theatre courtyard.

Overcast and drizzling skies forced country rock band, "Hangin' On," indoors Wednesday, June 6 where they played to a near empty cafeteria. The group was scheduled to entertain swimmers and sun-bathers during "Splash II" at Foothill's pool, but the unseasonable weather caused the event to take a dive.

Blatant hypocrisy in U.S. drug policies

Mercifully, it's finally over. We've voted and now we'll have a brief respite before the fall campaign assaults our senses.

So enough politics. Let's talk about victimless crime; specifically, drugs.

California and the United States have literally thousands of laws on the books to regulate "controlled substances." We spend millions, if not billions, of dollars investigating, arresting, trying, and incarcerating drug users and sellers.

Every new administration takes office with a promise to wage all out war to stop the flow of "dangerous" drugs.

Just how dangerous are these drugs? Studies concerning the relative danger of specific drugs are contradictory and often misleading. But let's look at four specific drugs: two legal and two illegal. Consider tobacco and alcohol; marijuana and cocaine.

Cigarettes are the number one preventable cause of cancer related death in the United States. Tens of thousands die every year of heart and lung disease directly related to tobacco consumption.

Smoking is a dirty habit that fouls the air and endangers the health of smokers as well as non-smokers exposed to the toxic fumes.

Then there's alcohol; a pleasurable drug that's easily abused. Certainly alcohol is hazardous to health. Cirrhosis of the liver is common among long-time heavy drinkers. But even more hazardous is the drunk driver. Between one-third and one-half of all traffic accidents are directly attributable to the intoxicated driver.

On the illegal side — marijuana. Doctors and scientists have been studying pot for close to 20 years and have yet to link the drug with any major illness or side effect.

Finally, there is cocaine. Another pleasurable drug that is even more easily abused. Cocaine is a much more subtle drug than many people realize. When ingested nasally, the euphoria is relatively mild and short-lived. The problems come when people inject the drug directly into their blood stream, or take raw cocaine, process it to a much purer form and smoke it.

But the real question is not the relative harmfulness of a substance. Almost everything we put in our system is potentially harmful. Eat too many Twinkies and it's possible to be driven to kill innocent people.

The real issue is the blatant hypocrisy so obvious in our system. On the one hand our society permits and even glamorizes the use of tobacco and alcohol, while at the same time expending tremendous amounts of time, money and energy attempting to eradicate "dangerous" drugs.

We send dope smokers and coke snorters to jail for as long, or longer, than we do violent criminals.

Authorities vehemently warn high school students of the harmful effects of marijuana and cocaine. The kids reject such scare tactics because they've tried drugs and know they're not as bad as they're led to believe.

Our drug policies send ambiguous and confusing messages to young people as well as making criminals out of 10 to 15 percent of the American public. Such policies breed contempt and disrespect for the law.

Alcohol and tobacco are acceptable drugs, marijuana and cocaine are not. This hypocrisy leads to productive and harmless members of society being jailed for personal use of a controlled substance; lives are ruined because of the inflated cost of illegal drugs; and billions are made in profits for the blood-sucking underworld which only supply what the public demands.

So what to do? The obvious and sensible solution is to legalize both marijuana and cocaine. Allow production and distribution in the U.S.; tax it and regulate it. Such a move would create millions in revenue for the states and bring millions of Americans back from outside the law.

Legalization would also keep those who commit victimless "crimes" out of jail and deprive organized crime of billions of dollars in illegal drug profits.

End the hypocrisy. Get the government off our backs and out of our lungs and noses.

District Board should control over-zealous DASB

As the De Anza Student Body (DASB) continues to throw monetary and conditional funding stipulations at the De Anza student newspaper, La Voz, it is becoming apparent that DASB is intent on exercising control over La Voz, which violates the first amendment rights of the paper.

The Foothill/De Anza College District Board has always had a "hands off" attitude towards the District's newspapers and student governments, and the Board should be commended for this positive educational attitude.

Student governments and newspapers are essentially learning tools, and both serve vitally important functions on the college campuses.

The student newspaper has the responsibility of reporting events on campus in a responsible and accurate fashion, and the student government has the responsibility of representing student interests on campus and redistributing student money back into student programs and activities.

The District's Student Freedoms and Responsibilities statement guarantees the rights of freedom of student government and freedom of the press, without censorship or controls. The Board has been perfect in following this position.

What is now happening is that DASB, which has the funding power over many student related activities on the De Anza campus, wants to exercise the type of controls over La Voz that the District has expressly forbidden itself from enacting.

DASB's budget for 1984-85 is in excess of $380,000. La Voz's yearly income from DASB is about $6,000, which is less than one half of one percent of DASB's total budget.

DASB wants La Voz to pay back its first $3,000 in advertising revenue. La Voz advisor Warren Mack says that is financially unrealistic.

DASB also stipulates that La Voz investigate moving its release date from Thursday to Tuesday; cut the number of copies printed each week, until the demand for the paper increases; print eight issues in the fall and spring, with seven winter issues sandwiched in between; deposit income derived from advertising into the student income (DASB) account, up to $3,000; pursue the establishment of type-setting classes to expand typesetting services to the campus; and employ student typesetters.

With these stipulations, DASB is responding to a year of La Voz articles and editorials displaying DASB's squabbling antics and infighting in an unflattering light.

With La Voz funding at less than one half of one percent of DASB's total budget, the only motivation for DASB's attack on La Voz is political retribution.

This retribution goes against the District's policy of freedom of the press.

If DASB continues to threaten the first amendment rights of La Voz, the District Board will have to step in and uphold its guidelines for student freedoms.

Letter

Bring it back

Editor:

As the current secretary of Alpha Gamma Sigma (AGS), it has come to my attention that the number of the club's active members is decreasing. This is due to the fact that many students who wish to be involved cannot be because of class commitments during our weekly meeting time.

In the past, Foothill had a college hour every Tuesday and Thursday. During this designated time, no classes were scheduled. Each club would hold its meeting, assured that all students would be free to attend.

I propose that we bring back college hour. This way, our clubs would have greater enrollment as well as heightened participation.

Precocious jr-high students attend Foothill

By RUTH NILSSON-LADNER

Fifty precocious junior high students, who scored at or above the 50th percentile on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) for college-bound 12th graders will attend Foothill College's Academically Talented Youth Program (co-sponsored by Foothill's Community Services and Arizona State University's Western States and Canadian Talent Search) this summer, from June 25 to July 20.

The program is designed to help develop the potential of seventh through ninth grade youths who are academically talented and eager to use that talent.

The idea to give gifted students at the junior high school level the opportunity for college education originated at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Maryland.

In 1980 Arizona State University responded to this idea by forming the Western States and Canadian Talent Search, an organization that is conducted by the University's Project for the Study of Academic Precocity (PSAP).

The Talent Search identifies academically outstanding youngsters throughout the western states and Canada, and over the last four years has served 17,000 students who are classified as "gifted" in math and/or verbal reasoning ability.

According to the Talent Search Program, there is a particularly rich pool of highly able students in the Bay Area. In the 1983 Talent Search, 214 junior high-aged students in Santa Clara and San Mateo Counties achieved SAT scores of 500 or above.

The University of California at Berkeley also offers summer classes affiliated with the Talent Search, but a survey showed that only a handful of students from the Peninsula were attending, though many were eligible.

"What we found was that people from this side of the Bay weren't going to the Berkeley program. This made us realize that there was a real need for one on the Peninsula," said Janice Carr, director of the Foothill Program.

Five intensive, fast-paced classes will be offered: algebra (computer assisted elementary algebra and intermediate algebra), covering all the topics normally taught in a full school year; expository writing; introduction to biology; and effective learning skills.

The latter is a workshop taught by Dr. Mike McHargue, Foothill honors program coordinator. It is designed to help students improve their skills in goal setting, decision making, time management and note taking.

"It will help them become more efficient learners whose study skills are commensurate with their ability to learn," said Dr. Richard Henning, Dean of Community Services at Foothill.

The program is highly academic in nature but balances this feature with the inclusion of noon-time social, athletic and cultural opportunities.

Special events are scheduled for each Friday, including a visit to the Electronics Museum, a workshop in the Japanese Cultural Center, solar viewing at Foothill's observatory and brown bag concerts.

Foothill College honors students will serve as leaders and supervisors of the noon-time athletic groups and special events, and will give tutoring and academic counseling, under McHargue's supervision.

According to Henning, the students will have the chance to interact with their intellectual peers outside of, as well as within, the classroom, an opportunity he sees as an integral part of this program.

Classes are five days a week, averaging two hours per class. "It's up to them how many classes they take and what they make of it; we are just here to meet their needs," said Carr.

The costs amount to $175 per academic course, and $20 for sports activities. "The program is self-supporting and is strictly run on funds raised from tuition," Henning said, pointing out that it operates on a break-even level.

At the end of the program each student will be tested and evaluated. Test results and placement recommendations will then be sent to the student, who will use the transcripts to negotiate proper placement with his or her school.

"After the summer classes, students will probably be able to skip several levels in subjects such as math and science, and some will be so advanced that they could continue to take classes at Foothill," Henning said.

Henning doesn't see Foothill's program as a recruiting gimmick. "I personally have the feeling that a precocious kid who spent the summer at Foothill won't return here as a fulltime student, the reason being that Foothill could offer him or her nothing new in terms of excitement about the unknown," Henning pointed out.

Nevertheless, he feels good about the program. "The service we render these precocious kids is a contribution to society for later years."

Fresh vegetables are now available for summer repasts. Using fresh produce in cooking always makes a meal taste better, and you don't get the chemical preservatives that are inherent in canned foods.

A quick and easy meal to prepare is stuffed bell peppers. To prepare this meal, you need: two large bell peppers, 1/2 lb. hamburger (lean meat), one cup minute rice, one 12 oz. can tomato sauce, dash salt and pepper, 1/4 medium onion chopped.

Slice the bell peppers in half and clean.

Boil the peppers in water for five minutes, drain and allow to cool.

Mix the hamburger with remaining ingredients, but only use 1/2 the tomato sauce.

Stuff the bell peppers with the meat, and place in a baking saucepan. Pour the remaining tomato sauce over the peppers and place in a pre-heated 350 degree oven for 45 minutes.

Serve with a vegetable of your choice and a light red wine.

Low turnout for ASFC elections

Exactly 140 Foothill students took the time to vote for Associated Students of Foothill College Junior Senators last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Re-elected were Brandon Tomlinson with 65 votes and Paul Junker with 56 votes. Newly elected were Randi McHargue, who had the most votes, 94, and Carlos A. Herrera with 66.

Students had the option to pick four names from the six candidates running. The junior senators will serve during the fall and winter quarters at Foothill next year.

Jackson stirs EPA crowd

By MICHAEL A. BELEF

The Reverend Jesse Jackson delivered a powerful, emotion-stirring speech to the more than 800 people crowded into the Brentwood Oaks Elementary School auditorium in East Palo Alto, Thursday, May 31.

Jackson's "Rainbow Coalition" supporters amassed blacks, whites, Latinos, Asians, students, senior citizens and children to fill the auditorium. Camera crews, reporters and photographers from radio, television and newspapers also were present.

An electrical current seemed to course through the auditorium as the crowd welcomed Jackson with clapping and cheering.

Jackson characterized his campaign as "a mission to defend the poor, a mission to reach out to the locked-out." He cited the Reagan administration for aggravating poverty and suffering, adding that "The poor, in fact, work the hardest and longest on the nastiest jobs, make the least amount of money and are the most patriotic. Their children are the first to die in our nation's wars."

Jackson criticized supply side economics as "giving money to the rich and letting it trickle down to the bottom," saying that "the only trickle the poor get is the trick."

"When a baby goes to bed supperless at night it does not cry in color, it cries in pain," he said in the moving voice that accompanied most of his speech.

Jackson stressed that Mondale and Hart cannot represent minorities because "they just don't understand." He added, "They didn't have their veterans come home from foreign wars and not be able to vote, they never had to march for the right to use the bathroom. They mean well, they just don't understand."

"Hart and Mondale want to raise the military budget in peacetime. We can use the money to refuel our nation," he said.

An exuberant Jesse Jackson at East Palo Alto rally.

Speaking on U.S. involvement in Central America, Jackson reasoned that "Military advisors give military advice and give military solutions. Bring our boys home and send economic advisors in their place."

Amidst whistling and shouts of "Tell 'em Jesse," Jackson continued: "If we can meet with China 10,000 miles away, if we can meet with Russia . . . we can meet with Cuba 90 miles away."

A deafening chorus of cheers was raised by members of the Stanford Service Workers Union and Stanford students when Jackson criticized the University's attempts to disband the union. Earlier on Thursday, Jackson spoke to longshoremen in San Francisco, saying, "If you want somebody who'll march in a picket line, send me." Jackson led frequent sit-ins and protest marches while a student in South Carolina during the 60s.

Jackson then called for silence and asked that the auditorium and TV camera lights be turned off. Again playing the southern revivalist preacher, Jackson implored the audience to come forward with campaign donations.

Preceding Jackson's speech more than 16 speakers and performers primed the audience for the Democratic candidate's appearance.

By the time Jackson appeared on stage the roof was raised with chants of "Win Jesse win, win, Jesse, win, win," and "Jesse, Jesse."

Student receives $2,000 art award

By PATRICIA PANE

Foothill College art student Jane Rochester is this year's recipient of the $2,000 Annual Community College Scholarship to the San Francisco Art Institute (SFAI). A resident of Mountain View, Rochester has studied art at Foothill since 1979.

Rochester received a Bachelor of Fine Arts in 1953 and then took time out to raise a family. When she returned to the job market a few years ago, she found she couldn't get a job that paid well enough to support her family.

At that point, she decided art might be an ideal way to make a living. She tried drafting, but didn't like it. She tried commercial art but decided there was "too much pressure and life's too short for that."

But when she took a drawing class, everything fell into place. "I love drawing," she said. "I love the challenge, the medium and I like the results. I have more self-confidence now. Love for what you're doing helps you build positive attributes."

Rochester also credits Foothill and its art faculty for those attributes. "The Foothill art department is spectacular and they have a high-caliber staff. Foothill helped me find myself. I've never been anywhere where the teachers are more interested in and concerned about the students."

At the suggestion of Linda Heineke, coordinator of the art scholarships and an art instructor at Foothill, Rochester delivered her portfolio containing "gesture" or "quick" sketches to SFAI. These, she explained, try to capture movement or mood of the model and are not finished sketches. Compressed charcoal, a chamois and eraser are all tools of the medium.

After several weeks, Rochester learned she had received the scholarship. But because tuition at SFAI is $5,700 per year, she may not be able to attend — even with the award.

"I would dearly love to go to SFAI," she said. "They have a good reputation and their specialty is art. Right now I'm working on financial aid."

Rochester is optimistic, though. "If it's supposed to happen it will. If not, something else will come up. I'm happy with what I'm doing and that's the main thing."

Even if she can't attend SFAI, Rochester will continue at Foothill, exploring all avenues of art: from art history to photography.

"Photography," she said, "will give me a new way of looking at things, composition, for example, and will also give me direction."

About her art, Rochester said, "I try to get the drawing to look like the personality or feeling or the expression in the face. It is important to relate to mood."

The artist captures the model's pensive mood in this charcoal.

Her drawings capture exactly that: they are alive with personality and feeling. Rochester said she is fascinated with people and hopes to do portraits someday.

"I get personal satisfaction and happiness out of artwork. I'd like to become the best artist I can be. I'd like to be able to paint, do prints and earn a living doing it."

She also has dreams. "Of course I'd like to be rich and famous, but also good. There are lots of rich and famous artists who aren't very good. But right now I'm still learning, feeling my way and enjoying life. My idea is to improve . . . all the time."

Jill Crisler, Foothill Female Athlete of the Year, expressed thanks to her grandparents, coaches "Peanut" Harms and Scott Overton, and boyfriend Rick Weyers.

Chris O'Brien, Foothill Male Athlete of the Year, said, "I did not expect the award, being a kicker. It's a great honor and I treasure the time I spent at Foothill."

Crisler, O'Brien named Foothill's top athletes

By BILL MUSICK

State track and field champion Jill Crisler and record field goal kicker Chris O'Brien were named Foothill's Athletes of the Year in an awards ceremony last Tuesday evening at Foothill College.

Athletic Director Bill Abbey presented Crisler the award for Female Athlete of the Year and said, "It is a great pleasure to present Jill with this award. She is not only a fine athlete, but she is an excellent student as well."

After presenting O'Brien the award for Male Athlete of the Year, Abbey said, "I will never forget the kick O'Brien made against West Valley. Everyone was knee deep in the mud. I don't see how he could have even kicked the ball, and he made it. Someday he will be kicking in the pros."

Crisler was nominated by track coach Dwayne "Peanut" Harms who said, "Jill finished first in the state in the discus, second in the shot put and fourth in the javelin. She set school records in all three events and has maintained a 3.46 grade point average while at Foothill. She's a hard worker and I think she deserves the award."

Football coach Jim Fairchild nominated O'Brien and said, "Chris is quite an athlete. He was the reserve quarterback on the team and the kicker. On field goals less than 40 yards, he was 10 for 10. He made five out of six attempts from 40 to 49 yards and one of three attempts for over 50 yards. The 56 yard field goal he kicked against San Francisco is the school record."

"O'Brien was Community College All State, second team All American and the top point scorer in Foothill history," Fairchild said. "He is now attending San Diego State and did an outstanding job kicking for them in spring practice."

Other nominees for Athlete of the Year awards and their achievements were: Jennifer Segar, basketball; Anthony Holt, basketball; Matteo Ferrigno, baseball; Cathy Benson, softball, Rodney Green, track; and "E" Carbullido, multiple sports.

Women's basketball coach Gene Hawley, in nominating Segar said, "It's impossible to say too much about Segar.

She scored 524 points this season for a 19.4 per game average. She led Northern California in scoring, she was All-League Golden Gate Conference and league leading rebounder."

"Segar was the team leader, and she improved 100 percent over the season. She is a strong athlete and it was a great pleasure to work with Jenny," concluded Hawley."

Segar scored 35 points June 27 against San Francisco for her season and career single game high point total.

Basketball coach Jerry Cole, who also emceed the ceremony, nominated guard Anthony Holt when he said, "Holt was the leading scorer on the men's basketball team averaging 16 points per game."

"He was twice named to all tournament teams and he is an excellent defensive player as well as being a top scorer," said Cole. "Tony hit over 50 percent of his field goal attempts and 80 percent of his free throws."

Holt is a business major and will attend University of California, Riverside. He has a 3.0-plus grade point average and is an excellent student athlete.

Assistant baseball coach Henry Torres nominated baseball MVP Matteo Ferrigno.

"Matteo has been the baseball team's most valuable player two years in a row and was named designated hitter on the Golden Gate Conference All Team."

"He was the team captain, the top hitter (.430), led the team in runs batted in (24), tied for the lead in home runs (3) and got the most hits (40)," Torres said.

Women's softball coach Elaine Rotty nominated last year's athlete of the year, Cathy Benson.

"Cathy is an all around player. In the last two seasons she has played every position on the team. She is a team player and was one of the co-captains."

Benson is majoring in physical education and will attend San Jose State University. She was an All League selection as an outfielder and the softball team's most valuable player.

"Benson hit for an average of .342," said Rotty. "She is an outstanding player in both basketball and softball."

Track coach Harms nominated high hurdler Rodney Green for the men's award.

"Green," said Harms, "is an outstanding runner. He's just a freshman and he is already the number two high hurdler in the Foothill record books with a time of 14.32."

"He finished fourth in the state this year and is currently training for the Junior Olympics. Rod is a physical therapy major and has a 3.0 grade point average."

The last athlete to be nominated was "E" Carbullido. "E" participated in volleyball, basketball and softball," said coach Rotty. "It takes an exceptional athlete to participate year round in collegiate competition, and without athletes of this caliber and dedication our women's sports programs could not survive."

SENTINEL coaching awards

COACH "PEANUT" HARMS TRACK AND FIELD

"Peanut" Harms coached the Owls' track and field teams to one of their most successful seasons ever.

"We have a coaching staff that is second to none" said Harms. "Scott Overton [weight events], Rudy Pearson [women's coach], Ralph Howe [field events], and Hank Kettles' [hurdles and relay teams] dedication will enable our program to go a long way in the future."

"This year's team is without a doubt the best group of people I have ever dealt with," said Harms. "To see the friendships and camaraderie being developed by the members of the team is phenomenal."

"I feel positive about the direction of our program and really appreciate what all those involved have done," concluded Harms.

COACH ELAINE ROTTY SOFTBALL

Elaine Rotty coached the women's softball team to an 11-11 season record and a 5-7 Golden Gate Conference mark.

"I've never coached a better or more skilled group of players" said Rotty, "and this was a decisive factor in our season."

"My idea of a winner is when someone can say 'I gave my best performance, I was prepared and I played at the best of my ability. I could not give more than I did'."

"Sometimes in sports," continued Rotty, "we put too much emphasis on the final score. We tend to look outward when we're not winning. That leads to blaming others when things aren't going just right. Instead, we should force ourselves to look inward and to see if we, as individuals, are doing our best."

Student named sports publicist

By ROBERT STOWE

Foothill College's sports department will enjoy greater press in the fall quarter. Bill Musick, current sports editor for the Foothill SENTINEL, will start as Sports Information Director.

"Musick will write up press releases for the media," Athletic Director Bill Abbey said. "We [the PE Department] have gotten away from advertising the teams here at Foothill, and we need to get back to that."

Musick has been involved in sports since he was nine years old. "I participated in football, basketball, track and baseball," said Musick, "and now I want to write about them."

"I think publicity and recognition is an important part of the total competitive athletic experience. The SENTINEL has expanded its sports coverage and in the process became an integral part of the athletic community."

"It will be my duty to try to extend this type of involvement into the outer communities. Foothill has an excellent athletic program," said Musick.

Part of Musick's job will be liaison between the local papers and the coaches. "There hasn't been anyone to front for the coaches," Musick said, "and this will give them a break from the majority of mundane questions. It will also get more

Bill Musick

Foothill news in the local papers. At one time," said Musick, "there was more sports news about Foothill in the local papers than any other team in the Bay Area."

According to Abbey, this position has not been filled for a number of years. "Until Bill, there just hasn't been anyone interested enough to do the job. Bill wants to write sports as a career, and this will give him valuable experience."

"Foothill has some great teams," said Musick, "and because there hasn't been someone to let the local papers know, they aren't getting the recognition they deserve. I'm going to do that."

Corfield loses in Olympic trials

By JOHN W. GARNER

The U.S. Olympic tennis team will arrive in Los Angeles without a Foothill representative. Craig Corfield, Foothill's top tennis player, lost last week in the first round of the Olympic trials.

Another Northern Californian, Andy Olyphant, handed Corfield a 6-4, 6-4 setback at the National Tennis Center in New York City, the site of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Derek Restagno of Stanford and Kelly Jones of Pepperdine won the Olympic trials completed June 3. They will join internationally ranked tennis stars Jimmy Arias and Timmy Brown to make up the U.S. Olympic team.

Although tennis will not become a formal event until the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, an international field will compete at the trial event this summer in Los Angeles.

Foothill promises to have a strong men's tennis team next year because four members of this year's team are returning.

Kelly Kerner, John Sullivan, Axel de la Beaumelle and Sylvano Simone plan to complete their second year of college eligibility at Foothill next year. Simone did not compete this season because of a shoulder injury.

Members of the team leaving for four-year schools are: Mark Weiss, San Jose State or UC Irvine; Brian Edwards Jeffrey, UC Santa Barbara; Gary Himes, Brown; and Michael Parks, San Diego State.

Corfield, although eligible for another season at Foothill, is undecided about his future plans.
