

Foothill students not surprised by election results

By JENNEFER PITTMAN

Interviews with Foothill students show that their votes in last Tuesday's presidential election reflected the acceptance or rejection of President Ronald Reagan's "tough-guy" image. Choosing Walter Mondale seemed to be primarily a vote against Reagan, rather than a vote for Mondale.

Kim Nordmo voted Republican because, she said, "Reagan's sincere. People can relate to him personally. He's not just some god up there. He's really personable."

"This may sound funny, but I didn't like Mondale's voice. It seemed really nasal, too typical of the candidates who always run. He just seemed like a bunch of bull."

Danya Dunn said she is a staunch Republican and though she disagrees with Reagan's views on abortion and religion, she likes his strong defense against the Soviets.

"Strong defense is very, very important," said Dunn. "If you give an inch to the Russians, they'll take a mile. I don't like all the nuclear weapons we're building, but I feel that's what needs to be done to keep them in place. I'm really pro-American."

James Slusser never registered to vote, but said he would have voted for Reagan. "I knew he was going to win anyway," said Slusser. "He's a good puppet. He'll elect whoever will suit his needs." Slusser said that the Star Wars Theory is a positive idea. "We need to keep up our defense."

"Mondale's too inexperienced for the job," continued Slusser. "Reagan's doing a good job and we can't keep changing presidents every four years. They've got to have a chance to do things."

Will Scharrenberg, Republican voter, said that he didn't like how

Mondale wanted to talk to the Russians. "You can't really talk to them because they wouldn't be trustworthy. The Russians will say whatever they want. Of course, I think of nuclear war, but it's not a constant thought," said Scharrenberg. "The weapon build-up will stop and level off. If both of us have weapons, there won't be a war because it would be a stand-off once we had enough weapons."

Democrats were not surprised by the election outcome. "Mondale didn't have a chance against Reagan's tough-guy image," said Neil Marquis, Mondale supporter. "None of Reagan's failures have shown up on his record. He's an ex-movie actor and looking good comes easy to him."

Marquis said that he could not see any positive aspects of Reagan's administration. "He's created the biggest deficit in our country's history. The arms race has skyrocketed to a dangerous level. His foreign policies have been atrocious. He has set relations with the Russians back to the MacCarthy Era."

Kristina Phillips said that she was brought up as a Democrat and voted Mondale on the ticket. "I was disappointed by the election," said Phillips. "I'm concerned because when the economy got bad, (Continued on page 4)

ASFC awards $2500 to seniors

By MICHAEL BELEF

Senior citizens who attend Foothill College received much needed financial assistance from the Foothill student council recently. A $2,500 fund was provided for senior citizens who are unable to pay for tuition fees imposed for the first time this fall quarter.

Many senior citizens live on fixed incomes which affect their spending so much that even the small cost of tuition, $3.50 per unit at Foothill, can devastate their budgets. Ann Connor, dean of Foothill's off-campus sites, gave the following example.

Lytton Gardens in Palo Alto is a low-income home reserved for seniors with the lowest incomes. The average income there is $200-$250 monthly, Connor said.

Each resident must pay one-third of his or her monthly income for rent. A mandatory monthly fee of $120 is paid for one meal, provided daily. From an income of $250, only $47 is left to pay for all other meals, transportation, clothing, medical expenses not covered by Medicare, entertainment and school tuition.

Given the deductions outlined above, it is easy to see how a charge of $3.50 for each college unit can devastate a senior's budget.

The classes most popular among senior citizens include art and music appreciation, current events, health and nutrition for the elderly, money management, dealing with death and dying, physical conditioning and world history with an emphasis on history as it relates to their lives.

Foothill Instructor Larry Rouse looks on as Leslie Faye, ASFC president, hands a $2,500 check to Ruby Collins. Photo by Michael Belef

Ruby Collins, a Foothill student and resident at Lytton Gardens, accepted the check on behalf of all the needy seniors. "I do thank all of you for this check," Collins told the student council. "If you only knew what it means to get out of your room and keep up with the world and take some classes. They [class instructors] keep us in pace with the world today, which is what we really want to be — to keep us alive instead of just drifting downhill . . ."

Connor said studies have shown that seniors who stay active and take classes are less subject to depression, loneliness and disease.

CC students up to par

By PATRICIA PANE

California community college students who transfer to four-year institutions achieve a grade point average equal to those students who enroll at four-year colleges as freshmen, concluded the Chancellor's Office Transfer Education Report.

This conclusion is based on information received from the California State University, where nine out of 12 community college students transfer, and from the University of California, where one out of 12 students transfer.

Of the remaining two, one student transfers to an in-state private school, and one attends an out-of-state private college.

The study also reported an increase in the number of transfer students the first half of the 1970s and a decline the last half of the decade.

However, the report indicated a slight increase the last two years.

This fluctuation is due, in part, to the number of high school graduates, but also to changes in four-year institutions' admission requirements, the end of the military draft, expiration of the GI Bill benefits, changes in student preferences and increases in financial assistance at four-year colleges.

All students median income below average

Most CC students self-supporting

By PATRICIA PANE

Three of every five community college students are self-supporting and two are dependent, according to a study conducted by the Field Research Corporation for the California Community Colleges Board of Governors.

Further, self-supporting students reported a median income below the median for all Californians; students who are financially dependent on their parents reported a median family income that is lower than that of other Californians.

The results were compiled after 69 percent of 10,247 randomly-selected community college students responded to a questionnaire issued by the research firm.

The study concluded that one of every 10 self-supporting students is on public assistance, 11 percent receive financial aid, and 16 percent borrow money for their education.

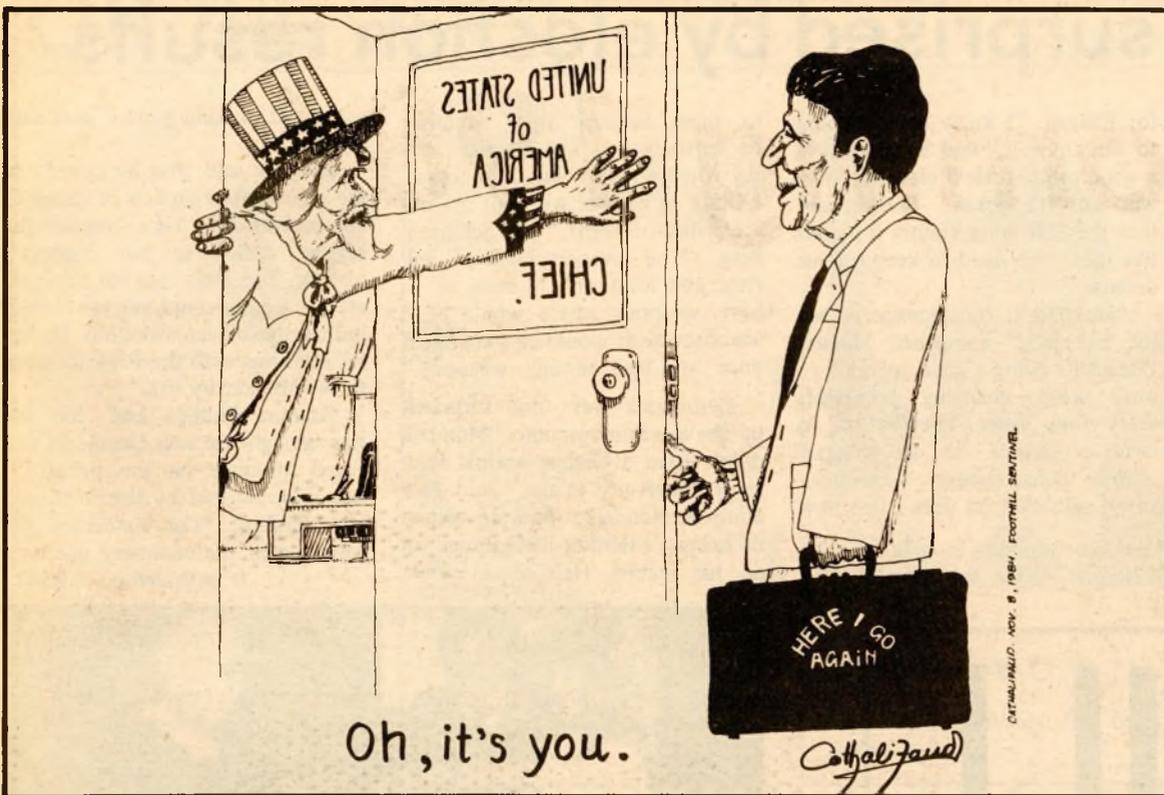

Also, the report indicated a change in educational objectives. Although past studies revealed that more students enrolled in basic skills courses, the trend now is toward occupational skills training, which accounts for almost 50 percent of the currently-enrolled student population.

In addition, one-third of the students reported that they intend to transfer to four-year institutions.

The study also found that California community colleges are racially comparable to the State's general population, with the exception that Asians are over-represented and Hispanics are under-represented.

Letter Campus prices are outrageous

Editor:
I would like to know why prices in the cafeteria and bookstore have risen so much so fast?

My usual large coffee went from 50 cents to 60 cents this week. Why the increase? General prices at the local grocery stores have not made such a marked increase. The coffee wasn't very good to begin with, but now I have lost my taste for it. A V-8 cocktail costs 80 cents!!!! The same size costs 35 cents at my local Co-op. How do you account for the difference? It used to be so convenient to buy something in the cafeteria rather than bring it from home along with my books and binder.

I also wonder about the prices in the bookstore. I have been told that most books have a mark-up of 75 percent. Is this true? Whenever possible, I buy my books at a university or other junior college (Mission, West Valley). They don't cost as much at other bookstores. (Some are less, others may be more.)

If I can help it, I don't buy anything here. It's too expensive. The employees must be hearing about it because they, as the prices, have become unfavorable.

Even a postage stamp is exchanged in the bookstore at the rate of 25 cents = 20 cents. One puts a quarter in the machine and in return receives a 20 cent stamp. Fair? I won't buy it.

Please clarify.

Letter Computer Graphics exciting

Editor:
It is with great pleasure that I write this letter of commendation. I am lucky enough to have enrolled in CIS-53, Programming Computer Graphics in Basic. This course is fun, exciting, and challenging. CIS-53 is taught on the Tandem Non-stop and an AED 1024 color monitor. CIS-53 is only the first of a proposed group of Computer Graphics courses to be taught by Mike Loceff.

Considering the state of education finances in general, it is especially important that good programs be supported. I consider this course and the other Computer Graphics courses a good program.

Stop in at the Computer Center and see the kinds of work we are doing. The monitor is in the left-most window of the Tandem room and usually the six terminals in front of the monitor are occupied by budding graphics programmers waiting for a chance to show their stuff.

I wholeheartedly recommend this course and look forward to taking more of Foothill's new computer courses in future quarters.

Commentary

Will Gandhi's son follow in her footsteps?

In June of this year, Indian military entered the Sikh's Golden Temple in Amritsar to drive out the Sikh revolutionaries. After a constant combat between the two, the revolutionaries were arrested and the military had access to the temple. They found ammunition and drugs hidden in the temple and submerged in the lake surrounding the temple.

The forced entrance to the temple angered a lot of Sikhs. They considered it an act against their faith.

On Oct. 31, Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India, was assassinated by her own Sikh bodyguards, causing Hindus all over India to rise against Sikhs.

Even though the violence has cooled down in India after a week of killing, this week will remain in many hearts because the people of India have lost a great leader. Indira Gandhi had governed India with a great insight of what this country needed.

When I first learned about the assassination, I was stunned. I knew about the problem India was having with the Sikh revolutionaries, but I never thought that it would reach this stage. When the inevitable violence struck after her death, my family and I feared for lives of people in India, not only Hindus but also my Sikh friends in New Delhi. India really does not need another senseless religious war like the one that led to the partition of Pakistan.

India, freed from British rule for only 37 years, has come a long way, thanks to this great lady who led India for almost two decades of that time.

Her father was Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru, the first prime minister of India, and a freedom fighter.

Being the world's most populous democracy, the country today has one of the largest military forces in the world, and has managed to remain neutral through the cold war between the communist and the western nations.

In the last few years of her life, Indira Gandhi was awarded a medal by the Prince of Edinburgh, for helping save the endangered Bengal tiger. She won the Howland Memorial Prize from Yale in 1960, and Bharat Ratna Award in India in 1971.

Upon her death, Rajiv Gandhi, her son, has succeeded her. Even though Rajiv Gandhi has been in politics since 1981, he had been in training to take over after her.

Until now, Rajiv and the Indian government have been in a certain kind of shock over his mother's death. The people of India have great hope in the Gandhi family. Whether he shall lead India strongly like his mother, remains to be seen.

Foothill Campus inspires poet

Dear Dr. Clements:

I am a retired space engineer of Lockheed, Sunnyvale, and am a resident of Palo Alto for more than two decades.

About two years ago I was afflicted by throat cancer. After a major operation of laryngectomy, I have been reading and writing poetry as holistic therapy in my convalescence. It has proven to be quite helpful.

The other day I visited your campus, and was deeply impressed by the beauty of the surroundings. I write to congratulate you for the wonderful efforts in maintaining such an inspiring environment for good learning.

Enclosed is a copy of my poem in dual languages of English and Chinese, expressing my admiration and felicitation. I hope that you will find it interesting.

To share my appreciation of your good efforts, you may wish to publish this composition in your campus daily paper.

With my best wishes and personal regards,

—John Kang

Femi Olukanni (front) and Santiago Molano polish up skills in preparation for league playoffs

Owls win Golden Gate Conference crown

By DEAN STEPHANOS

West Valley College gave the Foothill soccer team a big lift Tuesday by beating De Anza 3-2, thus handing the Golden Gate Conference crown to the Owls. The conference playoffs open this Saturday afternoon, with Foothill hosting Chabot at 1 p.m. The game will be aired on campus radio station KFJC (89.7) starting at 12:55 p.m.

The GGC title is Foothill's second straight, and fourth in five years. The Owls finished their regular season Wednesday against hapless San Francisco City College (0-6-1), and the expected win would give the Owls a conference record of 6-1-1, and 13-3-1 overall.

Foothill played the game of the year last Friday, defeating West Valley 2-1, in overtime. Striker Andrew Parker scored the game

Olukanni scored Foothill's first goal 10 minutes into the second half after a brilliant steal and subsequent shot from about 25 yards out. West Valley tied it just 10 minutes later, setting up Parker's heroics in the overtime.

The game was played in a steady rain, but Parker played a great game, despite the conditions. Coach George Avakian, however, believes he will be much better.

"Once he reaches his full potential, he will be a truly great player. He is one of the best players [on the JC level] in the nation, and he's only a freshman! He can only get better."

Cross country teams on winning track

By JOHN ROACH

Foothill's cross-country team went to Golden Gate Park last Friday to compete for the men's and women's conference titles. The Owls women's team beat out West Valley and De Anza to win the conference title. The men, who were expected to finish sixth overall as a team, finished third.

Anne Kendrick won the women's 2.9 mile race with a time of 16:40. Linda Mantynen finished second in the race with a time of 17:11. It was approximately 10 seconds after Mantynen crossed the finish line before an opposing runner crossed the finish line.

The next Owl runner to cross the finish line was Kelly Bungo who finished eighth in the race with a time of 18:08. Sue Bryan crossed the finish line with a time of 18:17 and in 10th place. Becky Van Zant, nine seconds later, crossed the finish line with a time of 18:26, but in 12th place.

Kendrick entered the old polo field at Golden Gate Park, leading all alone. Thirty-one seconds later, Mantynen entered the stadium.

After the race, Kendrick said, "The rain and wind during the race wasn't too bad." She went on to say, "The course was a little slippery due to the constant light rain, especially down the hills."

Kendrick and Foothill's top seven women runners qualified for the Northern California Regional Cross-Country Race which is being held Saturday, Nov. 10, at Crystal Springs. Race times are 11 a.m. and noon.

The men's race proved competitive throughout the 4.2 mile course. Foothill's top two runners, Paul Hoover and Mike Mathews, finished seventh and 10th respectively.

Hoover's time was 21:46, and Mathews' was 22:05. The winning time was 21:21 by a San Jose City College runner. Both Hoover and Mathews qualified for the Northern California Regional Cross-Country Race at Crystal Springs.

The next Owl following Hoover and Mathews was Mike Rouse in 18th place with a time of 22:27. Steve Scholz trailed Rouse by five seconds and finished 20th. Joe Sayles finished 28th with a time of 22:57.

In overall competition, West Valley's men won the conference title with 34 points (lowest score wins). Chabot took second place with 79 points and Foothill finished a close third with 83 points.

"They put their hearts on the line for this one," said Foothill

Men's cross country team takes third

Coach Dwayne "Peanut" Harms. "I've got to say one thing about these guys, they've got guts."

Mike Brown, who finished 40th for the Owls, said, "The rain actually made it easier to run through the sand around the three mile point."

"It was expected that our girls would sweep," said Harms after the races. "It was up to the girls, though, to prove themselves out there. Anne did super," he added. "She came in all alone with a time two seconds better than her last performance on this course. Now Anne is the runner opponents want to beat."

Triathletes train at Foothill

By COACH HANK KETELS

The newest sports craze, the Triathlon, hit America with a storm in the early 1980s. From its inception in 1970 to the present, it has continued to grow at an accelerated pace.

Foothill is now offering its second quarter of Triathlon Training. This course has attracted not only the accomplished athlete, but the average American seeking a means of maintaining a high level of fitness. Current members of the class are swimming 6,000-8,000 meters per week, running eight to 15 miles a week over the Par course and cycling 100 miles per week as a homework assignment. Class meets thrice weekly for a total of six hours.

Most onlookers only perceive self-inflicted pain bordering on insanity, but for the triathlete who has expanded his physical and psychological limits, the feeling of achievement is a satisfying reward! Fitness is like money in the bank and the aerobic value of Triathlon Training is second to none!

We all know that eating can also be fun and triathletes can eat almost anything they want without the fear of gaining weight!

If you have ever tested your limits or pushed hard, then you can appreciate what the triathlete experiences. If you have not done so, then you have a chance during the spring quarter when Triathlon Training will again be offered. Novice or expert, male or female, young or mature, all are invited to join.

"Dark of the Moon" spellbinding

By KENNARD GRAY

It was the season of the witch-boy as the Foothill College Drama department presented "Dark of the Moon" last weekend.

The play, directed by Jay Manley, was seasoned perfectly and captured the post-Halloween spirit of witches and the macabre.

Rod Gerber, as John the witch-boy who longed to become human, gave a hauntingly deep performance. He was bewitching yet sentimental in his love for Barbara Allen. It was an intense role which Gerber appeared to handle with ease.

The Legend of Barbara Allen serves as the basis for "Dark of the Moon," and Kelly Hudson portrayed the character well. She brought across the vulnerability combined with naivete evident in Barbara Allen. Hudson's singing was very rich as well.

The Conjurman and the Conjurwoman, played by William Leslie and Debera McLean, added an eeriness to the play in the beginning and end. They, along with the witch girls, who moved around in a style reminiscent of the Solid Gold Dancers, were very believable. Also, the Conjurman's vocal delivery was quite intriguing and showed great style.

The funniest character in this play was Uncle Smellicue, portrayed perfectly by Barrie Ryan. The uncle's off the cuff remarks and dry humor added a sense of realism to the play, and Ryan's facial configurations along with his voice were splendid.

Marvin Hudgens, the tough guy, real he-man who also wants Barbara Allen, was portrayed in an amiable manner by Kevin Kashima. Although Kashima seemed a bit insecure on stage, his overall performance as the he-man came across pretty well.

Foothill Theater Manager Floyd Holt played Preacher Haggler in a wholly religious manner. Holt also designed the versatile set which worked excellently with each scene.

The musical numbers were well staged and choreographed. Also the musicians on stage were in tune with the sounds.

This appeared to be perfect timing for a play such as "Dark of the Moon" and the players truly captured the intensity and intimacy needed.

"Dark of the Moon" runs again this weekend, Nov. 8-10, at 8 p.m. in the Foothill College Playhouse. Tickets are $4.50.

Financial aid available through SAAC

By ANSHU NAGPAL

The cost of a college education is rising steadily and, according to John Bostic, Foothill's financial aid director, "financial aid is not easy to obtain. Nothing is easy when it comes to money," Bostic adds, but he says, "If all the applications and forms are completed on time and you can show financial need, you will get some kind of financial help."

Student aid comes from five major sources: the federal government, the State of California, the college or vocational school you are planning to attend, foundations and community businesses. The loans come from banks, loan associations and credit unions.

To apply for financial aid, it is important to know the procedures for financial aid at the school where you are applying, especially if you are applying out of California.

If applying within the state, the best thing to do is fill out the Student Aid Application for California (SAAC) form, which is a financial statement. College Scholarship Service will analyze it and report it to colleges and schools of your choice. You will also be sent a statement telling you how much your family is expected to contribute.

The Pell Grant awards for full-time students range from $200 to $1,800. Eligibility depends on a formula developed by the U.S. Education Department. If your family is expected to contribute as much as $1,600, then you probably will not be qualified for this grant. You could still be eligible, however, for other grants.

Other available grants are the California state grants which are divided into three categories: Cal Grant A, Cal Grant B, and Cal Grant C. Cal Grant A is for low and middle-income students. Grants are awarded on a basis of need and the grade point average of the student. To be eligible a student may not have completed more than six semesters, or nine quarters of college work, and must be presently enrolled in at least six units.

Cal Grant B provides living allowances for very low income students. Most of the students applying for this grant are expected to begin their education at the community colleges. The student should not have completed more than one semester full-time or 16 semester units of part-time college study.

Cal Grant C helps students with tuition and training costs. The students must be enrolled in vocational programs in the schools they are attending for four months to two years in length. Three-year hospital-based nursing students are also eligible for this program.

Other kinds of aid available include Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants (SEOG) which provide students with other sources of financial aid; a College Work-Study Program which helps students pay for their education, as well as private scholarships.

To apply for any of these grants or for student loans, obtain forms from the Financial Aid office in the Foothill Student Service Center. The SAAC forms are also available there. Before applying for a loan, check how it might effect other financial aid you are receiving.

Election

people became very selfish and pragmatic. I think the selfishness will stay around a long time. Anyone who can make jokes over the radio about bombing the Russians is not being responsible enough."

Sherman Davis didn't vote and said he didn't understand where both the candidates were coming from, but he would have voted for either Gary Hart or Reverend Jessie Jackson. "Reagan's doing a lot of talking, but I don't see any changes. But now that he's president, I back him 100 percent. The only thing we can do is try to guide him toward things we believe in."

Davis is not afraid of the arms race, but disagrees that it would bring peace. He says, "It's all a big bluff. It doesn't frighten me a bit. Reagan says it's possible to defend against nuclear weapons, but someone will always come up with something better. No weapon can determine peace. If we can give the Star Wars weapon to the Soviet Union to get peace, then we can do it without the weapon."

Charles McGee didn't vote Tuesday and says he will never vote. "I come from a religious family," said McGee. "I think God will bring peace, not one man. I'm not afraid of a nuclear war because God will step in. The Bible's foretold all of this millions of years ago. Man-made governments cannot live in peace. They never have and it's getting worse. While I was watching Reagan and Mondale criticizing each other during the debate, I wondered what they would do for us."
