King plans progressive programs

By DAVID FULLER
Managing Editor

Taking the helm of a re-constituted Foothill student government this quarter with a resolution to "make the new government mean something to the students" are President Dennis King and Vice-president of Administration Tim Pleich.

King, who brings two years of student government experience to his office, has dedicated himself to carrying out a platform involving the multi-cultural program, student transportation to the Campus, student housing, a scholarship committee, monthly townhall meetings, an investigation of the sources and expenditures of student body funds, and a student judicial system.

To keep the proliferating programs in order and constantly before him carries a large black binder labeled "Action Book." In it he places every proposal presented to his administration which he feels students can "delve into immediately."

"There is no such thing as going into too many areas," explains Pleich. "All we need is enough students to get things going."

King admits that "for past governments such a group of programs would have been impossible to carry out in two quarters," but he points out that not only has there been a change in administration but there is a new constitution.

Under the old constitution a maximum of 75 students could have participated in student government. The new constitution allows for active participation by at least 300 people, according to King.

King and Pleich stress the simplicity of applying for any of these positions. "Any student can come into C-31 and take out an application for any of these posts," says King.

"We are going to use every means of communication available to involve people in the government," he continues. "If this is not enough, we'll go into the classroom."

"We know that student government will not be playing games," says King. "We are going to relate it to the individual student, to his wallet, his car, his means of transportation."

"We're going to go before the faculty and the administration to deal with situations such as demonstrations and violence on Campus. That's just one area. We want to find out what makes this Campus tick and we want to be part of the instruments which keep it going."

Pleich explains his "faith in the students" by saying "once they're motivated to do a particular thing, they'll get into it and they'll do it. And I have faith in the students in the government because I think they are really working hard."

But he points out that although he also has faith in the administration, "the main stumbling block for everybody is going to be that of getting together and establishing a trust and responsibility."

King stresses that the important problems facing the government are those concerning the use of communications channels among the students faculty and administration.

Analysis

Campus dialogue establishes rapport

By RON QUESENBERRY
City Editor

The Foothill College community has apparently averted the violence and disruption which plagues the College of San Mateo just 18 miles to the North.

Communication has been the key to a presently successful battle against student discontent and Disillusionment. "We have lines of communication," said Gary Cavazos, a tutor in the Study Skills program, "we love our school."

Another tutor in the program, Bob Marquez, described the situation this way: "At Foothill we know each other's problems, but up there (at CSM) they've got walls and when you tear those down there are more walls to deal with."

The administration's efforts were described by College President H. H. Semans, "we're doing as much as anybody and we're ahead of most places" in preventing discontent of Black and Mexican-American students which leads to such disruptions.

"The difference here is that we have proceeded only as fast as we had finances to do a thorough job," Semans explained.

Foothill has established a Study Skills Center, some classes in Black Studies and "good channels of communication between students, faculty, and administration," he continued.

However, English Instructor Mary Hoover warned against over-optimism. "You can't compare Foothill to CSM because we have only 50 students in our program while there are 600 students enrolled in CSM's College Readiness Program.

If there were more minority students on this Campus we would have a problem because there is a shortage of funds for Foothill's minority students. There are no financial grants available this quarter and at the present time even emergency loans are not available," concluded Mrs. Hoover.

Assistant Dean of Students John Freemuth admitted there was a shortage of funds, but blamed it on the administrative red tape required to obtain monetary assistance from the federal government. "We have to apply for these monies a year in advance but we hope to receive $150,000 in federal assistance for the 1969-70 school year," explained Freemuth.

"Foothill is also recruiting a coordinator for the Multi-Cultural Programs from the minority community in the North county," added Semans. "We prefer a Mexican-American because we already have two Black faculty members, but no Mexican-Americans. We already have 11 applicants for the post," he continued.

An interview board consisting of two students; Juan Paredes and Bob Pitmen, two faculty members; Mary Hoover and John Lovas, and three members of the administration; Dr. Harry Bradley, Demitra Georgas, and Dr. Semans will select one of the applicants sometime this month.

Offices up for grabs

The following student government positions are currently open for appointment: Finance Director, Mass Communications Director, Public Events Director, Elections Director, Experimental College Director, Student Campus Center Director, Rally Director, Activities Publicity Director, Intramurals Director, Student Athletic Director, Social Affairs Director, and one Senator. Each of the directors heads an appropriate student government board. Applications are now available in C-31. Completed applications are due Jan. 15. Secretaries are also needed for many of the newly created boards.

Positions are also available on several ad hoc committees: Judicial Committee, Vehicle Aid Committee, Student Loan Committee, Teacher-Course Evaluation Committee, Student-Faculty Convocation Committee, Transportation Committee, Housing Committee and Kiosk Committee.

Experiment courses commence

The Experiment in Education has moved its office in C-31 to A-32 behind the Chorale building. The program is made up of non-credit courses on an open forum basis. People with interesting ideas for courses should drop by the room and schedule advisers and times.

According to Earl Shorthouse, director of Experimental Education, some courses have been dropped due to the increased work loads of instructors.

KFJC, Foothill's student station, will begin two hour broadcasts on Jan. 20, with the music piped into the Owl's Nest. Students must also join Broadcasting 98 for this class.

The Experiment in Education is currently involved in setting up emergency vehicle stations for Foothill students. Other diversified projects concern transportation and housing for needy students.

The more interesting courses offered in EIE are Humanities taught by Don Buck, which is tailored to correspond with History 4B. An effort is being made to include this course in the curriculum. Italian I taught by Ron Ingalls, is a small, but effective class. The most popular courses, judged by student turnout, are Modern Welded Sculpture, Guitar I and II, and Sensitivity Training.

Shorthouse stressed that EIE is only as successful as the students make it. There is a definite need for a student turn out in all capacities, he concluded.

Sentinel-KFJC staffs welcome visitors today

A journalism - broadcasting open house will be held today from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the Sentinel office, M-24 and the KFJC office, M-1.

The open house will enable students and faculty to see the newspaper office and radio station and to meet the newspaper editors and the KFJC staff, according to Sentinel Advisor Herman Scheiding.

The purpose of the open house is to acquaint the College community with the functions of Foothill's newspaper and radio station, said Paula McGinty, president of the sponsoring Press Club.

Too many students and faculty are unaware that Foothill has a radio station and some are unaware that it has a newspaper, continued Sue Giller, vice-president of the club.

Another purpose of the open house will be to interest more students in taking journalism and broadcasting courses, added Scheiding.

As a special service for the open house, KFJC will air early today, to be in operation between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. Station Manager Jeff Osborne will be available to answer any questions about the station's operation.

Coffee and cookies will be provided by the Press Club.

Counseling for Vets

Counseling for veterans begins with the Winter quarter under the direction of the Experiment in Education. Taking on the job of counselor is Jeff Wohler.

Wohler says the office is to be the "mediator between students and the Veterans' Administration's Regional office in San Francisco."

Wohler will also handle problems dealing with education and benefits for student veterans.

His office is 3F in the administration building. The hours he is available will be posted soon.

Students flocked to tables near the end of the past quarter to evaluate their courses and instructors. A humorous copy of what happened during Evaluation Day is now on sale in the bookstore.

A serious account of the results will be available later in the quarter.

Budget bungled

Foothill College spends $3000 a year on two formal dances. De Anza College budgets a similar amount for two fetes of this kind.

The winter formal that took place at the San Francisco Hilton on Dec. 6, 1968 was a combined effort between Foothill and De Anza. The money spent on the dance was $3000. Approximately 360 people attended. This number rounds out to about four and a quarter per cent of the enrollment at both Foothill and De Anza.

The SENTINEL is pondering on just how many students and taxpayers know how the money they put into these institutions is spent.

There is a Multi-cultural program on the Foothill College Campus that is suffering greatly from lack of funds.

It is ridiculous to sacrifice the education of many young people for a couple of dances that are attended by a few.

FC exists-- 'No deposit-no return'

By DENNIS KING
ASFC President

With the new year comes a new constitution, a new government and hopefully, a new attitude concerning student government and the educational processes as a whole.

One thing, however, you'll find the same: this Campus, like your education, exists on a "No deposit-no return" basis. If you put nothing into your own education how can you expect to get anything out of it? If, on the other hand, you commit yourself to improving your own situation you'll find that you have entered whole new worlds.

Student government is what you the students want it to be. It is what you make it or let it become. You, by the very nature of being a student, are already a part. To those of you who feel that it just doesn't relate to the students, I point out the students of San Francisco State and nearby College of San Mateo who found out, quite by surprise, that co-curricular campus activities really do relate to them.

They found out the responsibilities of maintaining educational ivory towers are not just those of the gate-keepers but also the responsibilities of each member within the walls.

It is a challenge to commit yourselves to a set of principles or a course of action that may be unfamiliar. But it's your life, your education—isn't it worth it?!!

Generally, I am suggesting we all become more aware and more involved in our environment; that we realize that we never become too old nor too educated to learn something new, to do something different. Specifically, I am suggesting that we take the time to find out what's happening, that we get involved in our own student government, in our own multi-cultural program, in our own educational processes that surround us.

You can share your education while helping others.

How? Take the time to ask your representative your role in your government. They'll be glad to answer.

The challenges of education, of awareness, of involvement—these are the challenges of the times. It is up to you, as individuals, whether or not they get answered. It is only when these challenges are answered that we, together, can progress to make our education and our life really mean something. The choice is ours!

Editor's judgment controls content

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This letter is from Dr. Semans explaining his position on the editorial policy. It is directed to the Editor of FFT.)

TO: Editor, FAIRLY FREE THINKER

You have suggested via "The Sentinel" that you would like to know what the administration thinks concerning the editorial policy of the literary magazine. As one administrator, I shall try to state my position.

Some person or group has to decide what is accepted and what is rejected for publication. It should be the editorial board and advisor or advisors. No one else wants that responsibility.

When editors or editorial boards reject an item that is editorship. When someone outside the editorial board decides that something should be rejected, that is censorship. When a published literary work is evaluated, that is literary criticism. And there are thousands of literary critics, some more qualified than others.

In all of the above, judgment has been exercised. And everyone including me has a right to express his opinion about the editor's judgment, but in answer to your request for concrete and tangible guidelines you cannot write specific rules to replace judgment, only board guidelines.

Not everyone has a right to have his literary efforts or opinions published. To print or not to print is up to the editor and editorial board to exercise their judgment within a framework provided by the publishers, which, in the case of FOREGROUND and the FFT, is Foothill College.

The problems arise when the editor or editorial board misjudges what the publisher or the public which owns the college will stand for. I'm not concerned about the murmur of disapproval that may arise when an unpopular opinion is expressed.

I have to be concerned when there is a public clamor such as the one over the Shishin poem.

Judgments aren't made in social vacuum; at least they shouldn't be because whether we like it or not society does set limits. I'm not against trying to expand those limits, but in the interests of future generations of students I have a responsibility to counsel against such rapid expansion that a reaction sets in and we suddenly find out limits actually reduced.

Whether you believe or want to believe it, I have honestly tried to preserve what freedoms we have, by pleading for responsible and sensitive editorship so that censorship can be avoided. Most of all I don't want a state senator to develop the concrete and tangible guidelines.

Editor:

I just read "Classic Comments" and found it imaginative and entertaining. I am pleased there are people trying to supply the need to know what's going on. One correction in particular, though, is necessary in Volume 1.

It contains a gross and significant mis-quotation. An idea I felt would be helpful appeared as a comment, which I was told was mine, as: "Would it be possible to have compulsory submission of each instructor's handwriting to me for analysis?"

The exact comment did not say or intend this, but may have been unclear. I am sorry it was printed if this is how the compilers interpreted it. Their "quote is totally opposed to my thoughts, which are:

It would be possible if wide circulation of such information was desired by the students to request a Campus power figure to submit a sample of handwriting for a VOLUNTARY analysis to determine suitability for present position, actual and latent humaneness and anything else of relevance. Since my analysis would be to some extent subjective, the person in question, of course, would be asked to respond and submit counter-information, if necessary, which would occur with mine. I am very anxious to find out if such a venture should be started soon.

I am revolted by any form of "compulsory submission" and other inhuman acts. My concern is with our basic right to know the truth.

Acting workshop opens

Steven Polinski, a former Foothill student, has begun an acting workshop in Palo Alto.

Polinski said the workshop is of a trouble-shooting nature, designed for anyone interested in learning how to express themselves more effectively. "It is for people who have good ideas but have trouble communicating them," he said. Though the emphasis is in the area of drama, the class is open to anyone.

The class utilizes exercises designed to reduce muscular tension. Exercises to make the individual more aware and sensitive to his immediate surroundings are also used.

One such exercise is called "emotional recall," in which an individual recalls a past emotional experience and produces it in class as an aid to creating a better character in a play. In the "sense memory" exercise the student studies a certain object at home and then attempts to create it with his imagination in class. According to Polinski, this sharpens the ability of the individual to make objects more realistic and believable to himself and his audience.

The workshop is connected with the E.X.I. Theatre, which was formally known as the East Farthing Experimental Theatre. Members of the class are not required to participate in the theatre, but may do so if they wish.

Polinski has been involved with the theatre for about six years. He studied under Paul E. Richards, a head actor and teacher-in-residence of the Stanford Repertory Theatre. Polinski has previously taught acting at the Midpeninsula Free University. He wrote and directed the most recent production of the E.X.I. Theatre. In addition to conducting the workshop, he works as part-time drama director for the Betham Hebrew Congregation in Los Altos.

The acting workshop has ten members, which Polinski has set as the limit. It meets from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. every Monday evening. Students pay a fee of $10 per month. The class runs indefinitely with new aspects and problems of the theatre and communication in general being constantly introduced.

Polinski said he would start another class if enough people showed adequate interest. Anyone interested in obtaining information about the workshop may contact him at 328-1210 anytime. "If I'm not there, just leave a message," he said.

De Anza course offers visits to eight plays

An unusual drama appreciation course will be inaugurated at De Anza College winter quarter, with students attending eight live stage performances in the Bay Area as an integral part of the class. It was announced by Hillis Williams, a new drama instructor at the college.

The class will meet at 10 a.m. Mon., Wed., and Fri., with field trips to drama productions provided on Wed. or Thurs. evenings once a week.

Enrollment in the class is limited to 39. Space will be reserved for those who pay fees on a first come, first served basis. A charge of $35 will cover all eight performances and bus transportation as a group to six of the productions, outside the area.

Tentative plans are to have the class attend a major road show production in San Francisco, two American Conservatory Theatre performances, a performance of the Stanford Repertory, and selected productions at De Anza College, the Palo Alto Community Theatre, Foothill, San Jose State or comparable institutions.

Racism fight

Whites Against Racism, a new organization dealing with the problems of racism, is struggling for official recognition on the Foothill Campus.

The club's general purpose, according to Jan Wright, one of its student originators, is to educate the white community about racism and offer possible solutions for alleviating the problem.

An orientation meeting will be held at 1 p.m. on Jan. 14 in Appreciation Hall. The club's advisor, John Lovas of the English division, will open the meeting with a talk on racism. A student panel discussion will follow the opening speech.

An Army Kingfisher missile similar to the one pictured above has been donated to Foothill by Lockheed Missile and Space Co.

Lockheed donates 4 missiles for display in Science Center

Foothill College has been given four missiles for display in its Space Science Center, which is now under construction. The missiles were donated by the Lockheed Missile and Space Co. of Sunnyvale and are being stored in the corporation yard.

FANFARE UNFURLS

The new and re-activating clubs, as well as most of Foothill's continuing clubs, will be represented this Wed. at AOC's Club Fan-Fare. Each club maintained a table in the C-31 mall, passing out literature to interested persons. The purpose of Club Fan-Fare is to increase the membership of the clubs, particularly among freshmen and transfer students.

According to R. E. Van Horn, manager of material service, and Bill Johnson, warehouse supervisor, the longest of the missiles is the X-17. It is the Air Force version of the surface-to-air missile used by the Navy to explode atomic warheads 300 miles above the South Atlantic. Included with the X-17 is a separate ramjet engine.

The other surface-to-air missile is the Army Kingfisher, which was used for target purposes.

The X-7, a previous world speed record holder, was flown by the Air Force at more than 3,000 miles per hour.

The smallest of the missiles, the Discoverer, was used for communications and weather purposes.

Cagers at Chabot tonite

By Bill Trask, Sentinel Sports Editor

The Owl basketballers play their second league game of the season tonight when they travel to Chabot to meet a big and physically tough Gladiator squad. Eleven of the 15 Chabot players stand 6-3 or over, with the biggest man measuring 6-7.

Coach Jerry Cole's freshman dominated basketball squad finished out their 1968 year on the hardcourts by taking second place in the Allan Hancock Invitational at Santa Maria on Dec. 26-28. The surprising Owls ended with a pre-season record of 9-4. Two of the Owl's losses came at the hands of neighboring De Anza.

The Owl cagers started their pre-season slate out in grand style as they won their first five games. In order, Foothill defeated West Valley 84-63, Santa Rosa 81-57, College of Marin 77-51, Cañada 59-51 and Cabrillo 73-58.

Foothill's undefeated string was broken by De Anza on Dec. 13, with the Owls losing 56-52. The following night, Foothill came back to defeat Monterey Peninsula 66-60.

In the Foothill-hosted North-South Christmas Classic, the Owls lost to Moorpark 86-73, beat San Jose City College 68-62 and lost to rival De Anza 62-54.

In the Hancock tourney, Foothill bested Santa Ana 54-51, nipped Fresno City College 49-48 and lost to Hancock in the championship game 68-63.

The big guns for the cagers thus far have been ex-Palo Alto High standouts Mark Daley and Val Citols and two ex-Awalt stars Doug Leek and Greg Myers.

Vitols, a deadeye from the outside, hit 52 per cent from the field in 13 non-league games for a 14.8 per game average. Vitols, whose two-hand jump shot is a sight to behold, has a high game of 22 points.

Daley, a 6-7 center, is the Owls top rebounder to date with 100 and is shooting a fantastic 59 per cent from the field.

Myers, a hustling 5-11 forward, is shooting at a 10.1 scoring clip thus far.

Lanky 6-4 forward Doug Leek has probably been the biggest plus thus far for Coach Jerry Cole's squad. Leek is leading the Owls with a 16.8 per game scoring average, leads in total points with 218 and is the club's second leading rebounder.

Leek has hit for over 20 points on three occasions this season, with his high game being 24 points against College of Marin. In eleven league games last year at Awalt Leek's highest point production in one game was 17.

A bowling league to be held at Fiesta Lanes in Palo Alto will start off the winter intramural schedule. The league will begin Jan. 15 and will run every Wednesday from 4 to 6 p.m. through the quarter. Those interested are urged to sign up in C-31 or at Fiesta Lanes on Jan. 15.

The wrestling squad sports a 2-1 league and are 5-1 overall in dual meet competition. League wins have come over San Jose CC by a 32-11 count and over Laney by a final tally of 35-11. The Owls rave also bested West Valley (41-0), San Quentin (43-0) and Contra Costa (31-14).

Foothill's only poor showing to date came in the early going when they placed 19th out of 23 teams in the CSM Tourney held Dec. 7.

Leading the grapplers are 115 pound Bernie Olmos and 145 pound Dick Slack. They are undefeated thus far in dual meet competition with perfect 6-0 records.

FC Loses Opener

The Foothill basketballers came out on the short end of the score in their league opener last Tuesday night, as San Jose City College nipped the Owls 61-59.

Doug Leek paced the Owls with 16 points and was the big man in a second half Foothill comeback from 13 points down. Leek put the Owls ahead with 1:17 to go at 59-57, but SJCC regained the lead and went on to win. The score was tied 30-30 at the half.

Substitute San Jose center Rich Leo, filling in for regular Jack Pierce, who was nursing a strep throat, was the villain against Foothill's Owls. He fielded what appeared to be an Owl recovery and banked it in with three seconds left for the decider.

CCSF is at San Mateo and Foothill at Chabot on Friday night's slate while Diablo Valley visits San Jose and Laney and Merritt scrap.

Owl basketballer Doug Leek eyes basket and prepares to shoot in a recent practice. Leek, at present the Owls leading scorer, will start at a forward position tonight vs. Chabot.

Owl basketballers take 2nd in Hancock tourney

Over the Christmas holidays, the Foothill basketball squad took part in two tournaments. They took a second place in the Allan Hancock tournament at Santa Maria and finished sixth in their own Christmas classic.

In the Foothill tournament, the host Owls picked up one win in three attempts. That victory came in the second round over San Jose City College by a final count of 68-62.

The Owls moved to a 42-20 half time advantage as they shot a fantastic 65 per cent from the field.

San Jose came storming back in the second half behind the shooting of forward Evertt Breaux to cut the Owl margin to but two points at 62-60.

Behind the shooting of Greg Myers and Val Vitols the Owls moved back into a comfortable lead and went on to win.

The Owls opened the Hancock tourney with a 54-51 win over a strong Santa Ana five.

Foothill then went on to defeat Fresno City College the following night 49-48.

In the championship battle with Hancock, the Owls led most of the way although they went without a field goal for 13:57 minutes of the second half. In that same span though, Foothill tallied 16 points on charity shots.

The turning point of the contest occurred midway through the second half when Hancock's Malcolm Taylor, the tourney's Most Valuable Player, cut a three point Owl lead to 49-48 on a cross under the basket layin. Emerson Carr then followed this a minute later with a tip in to give the Bulldogs a lead they never relinquished.

Hancock upped their lead to 62-57 and held on to victory despite the last minute heroics of Owl guard Jim Davis who stole the ball several times and ignited fast breaks which brought Foothill back to within 64-63.

Vitols, who tallied 15 points in the championship final, and Doug Leek, who hit for 13 points, made the all-tourney squad.

Matmen plan for tourney

The Owl wrestlers venture to Fresno tomorrow to take part in the Fresno State Tourney. Approximately 30 of the top junior college wrestling squads from throughout the state will vie for top honors.

The team title will probably be out of reach for Foothill, but the Owls have at least four individuals who have good chances at first place finishes. They are Bernie Olmos in the 115 pound division, Dick Furuya 123's, Wally Nakabayashi 137's and Dick Slack 145's.

The Owls dual meet win string of four was broken by league opponent Diablo Valley last Friday. The Vikings handed Foothill a 28-12 defeat.

Picking up wins for the Owls were Furuya, Olmos and Slack.
