Student spies?? Ex-Soviet says yes

By DEBORAH SMITH

If Foothill College had a student exchange program with the University of Moscow, would we gain a better understanding of the people of the Soviet Union? Not according to Arkady Shevchenko, the Soviet official who defected at the United Nations in April 1978. At the Flint Center last Friday night, he declared, "The cultural exchange of students between the United States and the Soviet Union only increases opportunities for the Soviets to spy on Americans."

On the other hand, Shevchenko contended that the presence of U.S. students in the Soviet Union could dispel some misconceptions the Soviet people have of Americans. "They are exposed to constant propaganda that has led them to believe that the U.S. is the source of all the world's problems," he said.

About 1,800 people attended last week's Foothill Celebrity Forum to hear the man Time Magazine recently dubbed "the highest ranking Soviet diplomat to defect since World War II" and a first-hand observer of "the inner workings of the Politburo."

Arkady Shevchenko

Shevchenko, 55, served in the Soviet Foreign Ministry for 22 years. He acted as an advisor to Andrei Gromyko from 1970 to 1973. From 1973 until his defection in 1978, he served as an under secretary general in the secretariat at the U.N. In his memoirs, "Breaking with Moscow," Shevchenko also claims to have worked as a CIA spy from 1975 to 1978, providing secret information on such topics as the Soviet back-up positions on SALT.

Despite these credentials, Foothill student Kash Hathi was not impressed by Shevchenko's speech. "He basically repeated what Americans want to hear and hear all the time," Hathi said. "He didn't offer any new insights that might help us understand the Soviets, just a lot of small talk and generalities. He sounded like Reagan with a Russian accent. Maybe the same guy writes their speeches."

But the majority of the audience indicated approval for what Shevchenko had to say about his former countrymen. They laughed at his Kremlin jokes ("Brezhnev was dead for years but nobody told him.") They applauded when he said, "Some people have the illusion that we can resolve our differences with the Soviets, that we can appease them through trade and offering concessions in arms talks, that we can be friends. That illusion should be excluded from our minds."

Encouraged by the supportive response, Shevchenko declared, "If we make concessions to the Soviets, they will only think we are stupid idiots and keep asking for more concessions. We cannot trust them. They will lie and cheat."

Fewer people applauded when Shevchenko added, "Still, we have to face them. There are areas where our interests coincide such as nuclear proliferation."

In facing the Soviets, Shevchenko said "the U.S. must be strong, must have the capability for a second strike." Later he said that the Soviets came back to the negotiating table because of Star Wars. "The Soviets will never agree to complete disarmament. That would cause them to lose their status as a superpower. However, they might agree to limitations on the arms race."

Shevchenko devoted most of his talk to discussing what Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is and is not like. Gorbachev is not "a closet liberal" and is not "extraordinary," according to Shevchenko. "He is only impressive relative to Andropov and Chernenko."

Gorbachev is different from the old leadership, Shevchenko continued, only in his greater grasp of and concern for the problems of the Soviet economy. "I think he will be willing

Asians form Campus club

By LORI RENO

The newly chartered Pacific Asian Affairs Club (PAAC) of Foothill College has announced its regularly scheduled meetings will be held Thursdays at 2:30 p.m. in room F1.

Of the 13,500 students enrolled at Foothill, more than 10 percent listed "Asian or Pacific Islander" as their ethnic origin.

Already the PAAC has more than 40 students in its membership.

Club president Kampol "Toy" Sundaravej said he hopes to attract as large a membership as possible. "Our intention is to create positive feelings for Foothill College. We want all the Asians, as well as non-Asians at Foothill, to feel welcome to join us."

For more information, contact Sundaravej at 408/983-0513.

Moliere's "The Would-Be Gentleman" opens Thursday, Oct. 31, for a two weekend run at the Foothill Studio Theatre. Scheduled at 8 p.m. on Oct. 31, and again Nov. 2, 7 and 9, with a matinee show Sunday, Nov. 3 at 2 p.m.

Jay Manley will direct the cast of 35 which includes Rudolph Vest as Jourdain, Mace Perlman as Covielle, Jeff Schwamberger as Count Dorante, Kristen Jensen Flores as Nicole, Mark Christiansen as Cleonte, Judy McCandless as Countess Dorimene, and Dawn Haller as Lucille. Period costumes designed by Janis Cortez.

Tickets are available at the Foothill Theatre Box Office, weekdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., at $5.50 ($5 for seniors and students).

ASFC senate race to begin

By TOINY GEELEN

ASFC has four senatorial positions open for the winter and spring quarters of 1986.

Senators bring forth the students' opinions in council meetings. Adriane Urband, ASFC Elections Director, said, "Senators are basically the eyes and ears of the students."

Bloesser/Semans are doing OK

By KATANNYA JANTZEN

Robert Bloesser, Language Arts instructor, released from Kaiser Hospital-Coronary Care Unit, Friday, Oct. 11, is convalescing at home, according to Debbie Gravely, Language Arts secretary. "The good news is he's following doctors' orders and is getting better. The doctors say his heart is mending," she said.

Bloesser, who suffered a major heart attack Sept. 24, is reported to be up and walking around but is not expected to be back in the classroom until spring quarter.

Students may contact Bloesser through the Language Arts Department, Foothill College.

Dr. Hubert H. Semans, president of Foothill College from 1967-73, is in El Camino Hospital where he has been undergoing treatment for a broken hip.

Semans broke his hip in a fall in San Francisco the week-end of Oct. 5.

According to Foothill College President's Executive Assistant Shirley Sternhagen, the former president "sounded very chipper" when she spoke to him on the phone. "He has a lot of spunk, and I'm sure he'll be fine real soon," she added.

Cards and inquiries should be directed to The President's Office, Foothill College.

Semans is being released this week to convalesce at home.

Along with that senators also join committees of their choice and give their input to help committees such as the Governing Rules Committee, the Community Affairs Committee, or any of the other committees. Besides the presently existent committees, new ones are constantly being formed to suit the changing needs of the student body.

In order to become a senator, applicants pick up a petition from Jean Thacher in the Student Activities office. They are available starting Oct. 28.

Petitions will be due by 3 p.m. on Nov. 15. Petitions must include the registrar's signature which certifies that the applicant is taking more than eight units, and the Student Government Advisor's signature.

Elmore appointed editor

By DONNA MARIE RIGUERO

Steve Elmore has been appointed editor of the SENTINEL for the 1985-86 school year. Elmore is a second year Foothill journalism major.

One of Elmore's goals for the SENTINEL this year is keeping the focus on students and campus activities relevant to students. "I'd like to turn the paper around from the Jennifer Pittman era [former editor]," said Elmore, "by using the paper as a means of solving problems, not creating them, by staying in touch and by giving full scope . . . like a community paper."

When asked about his personal goals, Elmore said that his plans include attending San Jose State where he will continue his present major. Beyond that he lists investigative reporting, writing novels and screen plays as just a few of his future aspirations.

Campaigning can be done through posters and speeches, though only in designated areas.

Students will vote for the candidate of their choice on Dec. 25 and 26 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The voting will take place in front of the bookstore. The student obtains one ballot card, after which their name is crossed off the list.

The Elections Committee will count ballots after the voting closes. Official announcement of who will be senators will be made at the regular student council meeting on Dec. 3.

"Last year there was an amazing amount of people who showed up to vote. My goal this year is to get even more people involved," Urband said.

guage and the ability to manipulate it evolved into a love of writing," Elmore says of his interest in journalism. His other interests include volleyball, horseback riding, playing the bass guitar (he's played professionally for four years) and skiing.

EDITORIAL

Contraception needs further evaluation

A motion was made Tuesday by Associated Students of Foothill College (ASFC) Financial Director Teresa Joyce to give $2, 000 as a one time expenditure for equipment to start a family planning center on Campus.

The idea of having a service on Campus to inform and aid students in family planning is a good one, but there are questions that need to be asked regarding the extent of the services.

Should contraceptives be sold on Campus? With the growing conservatism today, this idea may not be relished. While some might not consider this a problem, others might be offended by the idea.

The 60s and 70s were known as the sexual revolution. Today, however, the tide is turning in light of AIDS and the numerous sexually transmitted diseases. Many might feel that selling contraceptives on Campus would be an open invitation for casual sex.

On the flip side, is it not better to insure against an unwanted pregnancy that could lead to an unwanted child? Many might find it more convenient to go to a family planning counselor on Campus and would be more inclined to take precautions.

There is a need for education. Whether or not the clinic goes beyond education and testing is a matter that should be carefully examined by the Student Council before they appropriate student funds.

Give Blood

Donors needed now

The American Red Cross will be on Campus Oct. 28 and 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. to collect blood from anyone wishing to make a blood donation. Sign-ups for this cause are being accepted at the Student Center, front desk.

Proof of immunization

By LORI RENO

The State Board of Health has recently strengthened their earlier recommendation, how requiring all colleges and universities to demand proof of immunization by students under age 30, against measles, mumps and kiphtheria and typhoid.

According to Elyse Barnett-Munsen, Health Educator for Foothill College, no arrangement has yet been made for verification of student immunization at this campus. However, she cautioned that other colleges, including Stanford, have been requiring proof of immunization at registration, and will hold up a student's registration until proof has been provided.

"All continuing students under age 30 would be well-advised to secure a copy of their immunization record from their physician now, or during Christmas break," said Barnett-Munsen.

Although the effective date for this requirement has not yet been determined, it is inevitable that such proof will soon be necessary to complete registration at Foothill.

"Without such proof," she said, "the school will deny registration until the student is re-vaccinated."

If your immunization records are incomplete, or nonexistent, and you must be revaccinated, the County Health Department offers low-cost vaccination in a series of two injections, at $5 an injection.

Be seated

By LYNN HENSEL

How effective are paper toilet seat covers in public restrooms? It seems that any germ could easily penetrate through the paper if it really wanted to. Are they for sanitary purposes or for comfort?

I was so curious about this profound subject that I asked my friend, an infection control nurse, just how pro-health these covers are. She answered that they do not stop infection or diseases from spreading any more than sitting on a dry, clean toilet seat, simply because one does not acquire an infection or disease from toilet seats.

For those who are more comfortable using the paper covers, the choice is yours, but should you decide not to, you are safe.

Campus gives good vibes

By TERRENCE TRIVERS

I had driven past Foothill on I-280 many times before, but had only experienced it as some amorphous brown blob on the top of a hill. This was the first opportunity to meet this somehow living organism fact to face.

"Nice school," I thought to myself as I huffed and puffed up all those steps, looking for administration. I don't know why, but after I found it, I felt compelled to wander, to soak up the vibes here at Foothill College.

For the past five years, I'd been going through a somewhat guilt ridden time in my life. I was a marketing major at San Jose State and various other local institutions for three years until I realized that was not where I wanted to be. That was where Mom and Dad and the "Joneses" wanted me to be; I went on with it for a while, until my GPA began to suffer, and I quit. So for two years after the marketing incident, I dillied in this and dallied in that, until Foothill.

I don't understand how or why, but coming here for the first time was somewhat like a religious experience; a philosophical awakening. I was so awe struck with feelings of familiarity and warmth that I was inspired to write about it in my journal. It was as though this very hill rumbled as I stepped onto it.

It rumbled and echoed somewhere deep within myself. Something was telling me that now was the time to get back into school; but this time it would be for me, not Mom, Dad or the "Joneses."

I would start fall quarter a Philosophy/Journalism major. (This seemed appropriate since Foothill was a philosophical awakening that I felt compelled to write about.)

It may sound trite, but Foothill campus is what gave me the impetus to start over. A renewed energy and motivation came over me. I knew then that I would eventually depart as a successful product of this hill; a major contributor to humankind, and any other kind, thanks to those Foothill vibrations.

Owl Sports Notes

Foothill teams in action

By WILL BAILEY

Soccer coach George Avakian has a lot to smile about this season. On Friday, the state champion Owls (4-1) stopped Canada 3-0. Femi Olukanni, with one assist by Curt Lewis, scored twice for the Owls. Olukanni also assisted Jadir Enrique for the third goal of the game. The outlook for this season looks bright. Foothill hosts De Anza next on Friday, Oct. 25. Starting time is 3:15 p.m.

The cross country team's season is now well under way. Coach Dwayne "Peanut" Harms expects another good season, possibly winning both male and female divisions. On Friday, Oct. 25, the team will have a meet at Golden Gate Park. The women will face San Jose at 2:30 p.m., while the men will be pitted against De Anza and San Mateo at 3:30 p.m.

How far will the women's volleyball team go this season? Coach Elaine Rotty must be pleased with the Owls' victory last Friday in which Diablo Valley was routed (15-1, 15-6, 15-1). On Friday, Oct. 25 the Owls will play at West Valley at 7 p.m.

Owls' football team and Coach Scattini played a hard-fought game vs. visiting San Mateo last Friday, but lost 34-27. The Owls nearly broke their losing streak which is now at a total of six straight losses. Foothill was ahead 21-20 in the third quarter, but then fell behind for the remainder of the game. Kelly Coan had a good day, throwing for 280 yards, including two TD passes to Andy Coan and one TD pass to James Buntin. Buntin also had a 40-yard TD run giving him 61 yards rushing for the night. On Friday, Oct. 25, the Owls go on the road to Hayward, facing Chabot College at 7:30 p.m. Home games are broadcast on KFJC, 89.7 FM.

Golfers wanted

Gordon Holler exhibit open

Screenprints, by Foothill College fine arts faculty member Gordon Holler, will be on display Wednesday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the Pro Arts Gallery, 1920 Union St., Oakland, through Nov. 20.

Originally trained as an abstract painter, Holler was an artist and photographer with an archeological research project in Egypt before joining the Foothill faculty in 1968. He subsequently got involved in printmaking in 1970 in answer to his students' needs for photo-screen printing instruction for anti-war posters against the Viet Nam War, and later explored other graphic processes and experimented with mixed media and multiple impressions.

Of these multiple impressions, Holler says, "These were always erased in painting as the image developed and they never existed for me in the traditionally processed photograph. They became important not only because of their value in revealing alternative possibilities in the development of an idea, but most importantly because they could reveal differing aspects of the original experience."

Holler says his work has changed slowly but constantly over the last 15 years. Early work often featured solitary and passive nude figures. More recent work features two or three figures in created confrontation at night or outdoors.

Hidden Villa offers credit

By ANSHU NAGPAL

Foothill College will be giving unit credit for all students who help up at the Hidden Villa Ranch located on Moody Road in Los Altos Hills. For credit the volunteers must enroll in RC74-01 or RQ76-01 which are three unit classes each.

According to Elizabeth Bowden Smith, the Administrator of Environmental Program and the master scheduler at the ranch, the volunteer work consists of taking children for tours and showing them how to take care of and preserve the earth.

Smith also said most of the volunteers they get are from the community. All the volunteers are trained to spend the day with the children. The ranch was opened 60 years ago and the gates are open to everybody.

The ranch is open Wednesday through Friday this fall. It will be open Tuesday through Friday in the spring. For more information call 415/948-4690.

"Available in the Media Center are APPLE IIe and Macintosh microcomputers as well as a variety of software, or students

Also located in the Media Center are many audio visual programs available to students in the form of audio cassettes, video tapes, laser disks, slides and records, as well as the necessary equipment for their use.

Library hours during the week will remain from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Friday.

What about those Owls?

ROBERT SANDERS
(Member of the team):
The team needs more unity; we're not a sorry team, really. Unfortunately there are only nine returning players this year so the team is young.

STACEY COLGAN
(Child Development):
The team had better get on it, and get with it or they'll give the school a bad name; 52-0 is pretty bad.

SHERYL HOWARD
(Undeclared):
No comment. Couldn't stop laughing.

DAVID HOEHN
(Business):
52-0? They should work on their moves, and figure out what they're doing wrong.

GEBHARD EBENHOECH
(Linguistics):
Ha! Ha! Ha! I'm surprised that a j.c. football team could be that bad; the guy who recruits for the soccer team should help out the football team.

District Board meets

By JULIE GRIMSTEAD
The Board of Trustees for the Foothill-De Anza Community College District met Oct. 21. Dr. Thomas Fryer, chancellor, and Caroline Turner presented a report on the "Non-Transfer" student research project. They explored the reasons why full time college students, who enroll directly after high school, are still enrolled in the same community college four years later. The board discussed the content of the upcoming Foothill-De Anza presentation to the Master Plan Review Commission, which is reviewing the mission and roles served by the community colleges. Foothill and De Anza will express their views on the roles of community colleges in their presentation to the commission on Oct. 29.

Shevchenko

to try to do something to improve the economy . . . within the limits of the Soviet system." Shevchenko described the Soviet economy as one plagued by constant shortages in many basic consumer items from meat to housing. "Families are lucky if they have a one room apartment," he said. In the area of foreign policy, Shevchenko said the goals and strategy of the Soviet Union will remain the same. Their goal, according to Shevchenko, is to surpass the capitalist world economically and militarily. "With strong will, determination and an understanding of the limits of cooperation," Shevchenko concluded, "we, not the Soviets, will win this historical competition." Shevchenko has not always been considered an authority on Soviet leadership by Americans. In October 1978, Time reported that the CIA had concluded that Shevchenko "had little knowledge of the inner workings of current Soviet policies or intelligence operations." Six years ago, Shevchenko tried to publish his first manuscript, "From Captivity into Freedom," but was flatly rejected by two publishers. Last year, Shevchenko completed a new manuscript, "Breaking with Moscow," to which he had added not only intimate conversations with top Soviet leaders such as Nikita Krushchev, but all the elements of a spy thriller as well — cinematic car chase scenes, suspenseful clandestine meetings with the CIA and shadowy KGB agents. In February, Time published two issues containing excerpts from Shevchenko's book. With this send off, the movie rights to "Breaking with Moscow" were quickly sold and the book itself rose to the top of the best-seller lists. Shevchenko now lives with his American wife in Washington D.C. His first wife committed suicide after the news of her husband's defection. (Shevchenko suspects that the KGB murdered her.) He lectures around the country ($6,000 to $12,000 a speech, according to Time) and teaches courses on Soviet foreign policy and negotiating strategy to U.S. diplomats. He also does occasional consulting for the CIA and advises the Reagan administration on arms talks.

Marilyn Olson named director

By LYNN HENSEL
Marilyn Olson is the new director of the Re-Entry Program at Foothill. She knows all about re-entering college. She returned to college herself seven years ago, after raising her own family and teaching kindergarten over a 21 year span. She also has had two years experience as a peer counselor in a support group of re-entry students. Olson will replace Mona Williams, who resigned as director of this federally-funded program this past summer. A warm and receptive person, Olson is anxious to drum up public relations with the students and potential employers in the surrounding communities. She encourages not only women but any interested men to contact her. She states her focus is two-fold: to assist students to obtain jobs in their chosen field of study, and to provide support and guidance to those re-entering college.
