" Mr. Clary said that he will continue to recycle at other centers until it is relocated.

Recycling center closes

De Anza's Community Recycling Center, located in parking lot D, was closed Monday to allow the college room for expansion of the Child Development Center and the tennis courts.

"They've been making grumbings for us to move to a new location for several years now," said Kathy Weeks, operating manager of the recycling center. "But they have graciously allowed us stay here for the past 20 years rent free."

Felice Data, director of marketing and communications for De Anza, gave reasons for terminating the center. "Five years ago we realized that because we're an educational institution and our bottom line is instruction, we were going to need more space for our Child Development Center and tennis courts."

Data also added the removal will allow for a few more needed parking spaces. She also believes De Anza's

DAC students display art

By Melanie Garrett
News Editor

In an effort to expose art to De Anza students, the Special Advisory Committee is currently displaying black and white, and color photos in the Hinson Campus Center.

Sculptures previously shown in the Campus Center were the first phase of the project and the photos are the second. Other possible future exhibits include paintings, and a variety of sculptures. Each work of art is created by De Anza students.

The Special Advisory members give suggestions to the Art on Campus Committee on the type of art which should and can be displayed.

The members are made up of people from the Photo Club, the Art Association, the Campus Center, two faculty members and two DASB Senators.

The creation of the Special Advisory Committee began when John Cognetta approached Pete Delaney, a representative of the Art Association, and asked to have artwork in the Campus Center.

"That was the embryo of the project," said Delaney. "And now, a year later, we've expanded into an advisory committee."

Delaney believes this venture exposes artwork to students who wouldn't otherwise take interest. "Having it displayed in the dining room causes people to take notice, interest and possible appreciation of the art."

Wilfredo Castano, photography instructor and Special Advisory member, agrees the exhibit will benefit De Anza. "It should be an uplifting experience to see these photos, especially when you know they were created by your fellow students."

"I don't care if the students like the art or not," said Klaus Dehn, Campus Center and advisory board member.

"So many students don't go to art museums. I think they need to be exposed to it and the Campus Center is the perfect place for it."

Different art exhibits will be displayed each quarter. However, if the Special Advisory

National Condom week starts today Health office to participate in promotion of condom week

By Theresa Albers
Staff Reporter

National Condom Week, February 14 to 21, declares that students should love and care for their own bodies first.

Studies prove that condoms prevent unwanted pregnancies.

Another important benefit is prevention of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases (STDs).

In a continuing effort to educate students, the De Anza College Health Office will participate in National Condom Week.

Mary Jo Kane, Health Educator, will distribute literature, buttons, and condom sampler packages in the Campus Center today between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m..

Free literature and condoms are always available at the Health Office. It is now located in a trailer in parking lot E near the Minolta Planetarium. Ruth Foy R.N., Coordinator of Health Services, says that pamphlets and information are informative and not suggestive.

Both Foy and Kane use "straight talk" to make students aware that they should take responsibility for their actions. They stress that each student is a worth while and important person. Because of this, the student has the right to openly communicate and negotiate with the partner concerning safe sexual practice. They hope students will realize that their life, health and future are more important than 15 minutes of unsafe sexual pleasure.

Art on Campus Committee honors Orr

Dedication ceremony held in Administration Building

By Eugene Renteria
Editor in Chief

The Art on Campus committee held a ceremony in the administration building to honor the designer of the sculpture, Eric Orr. The sculpture is titled "De Anza Singularity."

Orr is an internationally known artist. He lives in Southern California in the Los Angeles area.

"It seemed like a great opportunity to put a work of art in a college atmosphere," said Orr.

Orr feels that it (having art on campus) is good because as students grow older, they will discover that art is the best thing made by man.

Orr came up with his idea in a most unusual manner. He was in the Sunken Gardens and the idea for his work just popped in his head.

"That's how (design) ideas come, they don't come from where you expect they would come from," said Orr.

Orr designed the sculpture so it would not use a lot of water, since drought is a major problem in California.

"It's like a quarter of a flush from a toilet," said Orr.

The ceremony took about a half hour to finish. The speakers at the ceremony were De Anza College President A. Robert De Hart, Art on Campus Chairperson Al Rutledge, and finally Orr got to address the small crowd that had gathered in the administration building.

The process that brought Orr to the campus took several months according to Rutledge.

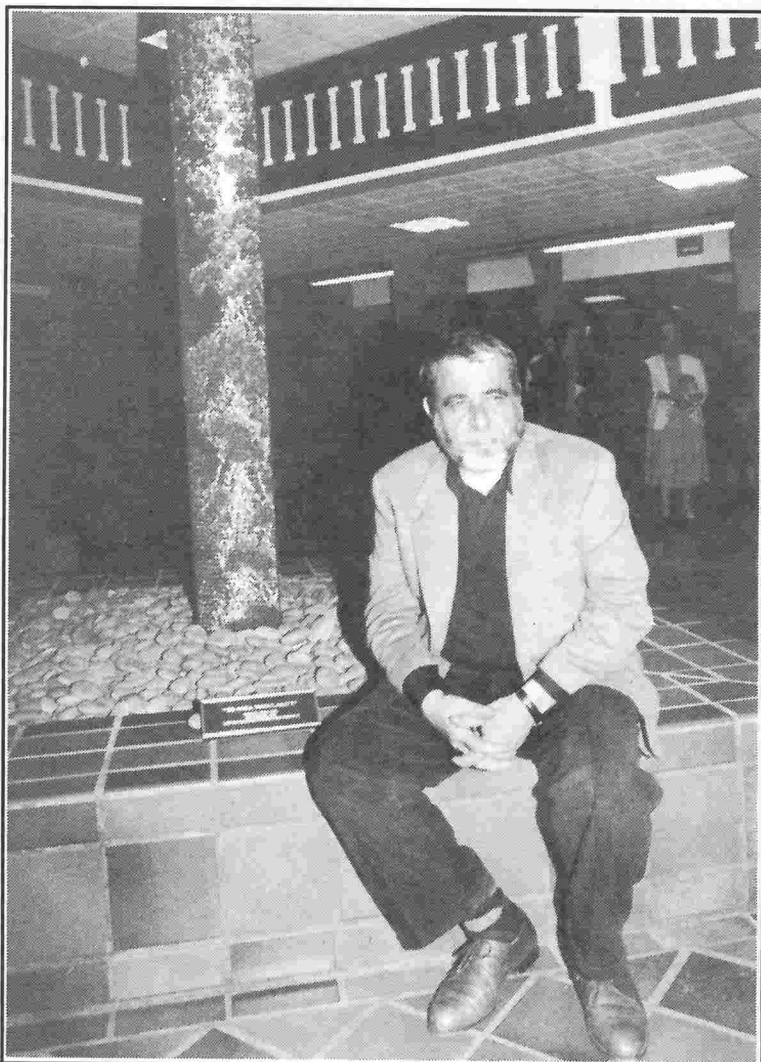

A committee was formed that took a look at a lot of artists. Out of this the committee chose eight artists to interview. After that they cut down the list to four applicants. Out of these four Orr was chosen to do the art work.

"It's like a quarter of a flush from a toilet"

Eric Orr

One percent of the money that was used to remodel the administration building went into the art project. Rutledge said that this policy is new and that all the remodeling done on campus will have one percent of the funding go for putting a piece of art on campus.

Sculptures, paintings, fabrics, perhaps even murals, any type of art that is appropriate (will be put on campus)," said Rutledge.

Artist Eric Orr sits in front of his sculpture "De Anza Singularity." This will only be the first of many projects conducted by the Art on Campus Committee.

Bush's energy strategy favors big business

By Orlando Santos
Editorial Editor

President Bush's national energy strategy plan threatens the safety of our environment. Bush recently proposed to speed up the process of oil exploration, and to expedite the licensing of new nuclear power plants. The President's energy plan does not propose stricter standards for automobile fuel efficiency, nor does it seek to encourage fuel conservation.

Bush, who has claimed to be the "environmental president" has received sharp criticism from a number of environmental groups. His proposal would ensure greater profits for oil corporations and nuclear power contractors.

Bush is using the war in the gulf as an excuse to encourage oil exploration off our coasts. The fact is that only 11 percent of our oil is extracted from the Middle East. This amount can be made up through oil conservation and fuel efficiency. By shifting the focus of our energy policy from oil exploration and nuclear energy to fuel efficiency and conservation, pollution caused by the burning of fossil fuels would be reduced, and the development of alternative energies could be emphasized. Since the world's oil supply will be exhausted in about 50-100 years, it would make sense to find ways to conserve oil rather than rushing to consume the world's supply of fossil fuels.

If Bush's energy proposal is approved by Congress, Alaska's 1.5 million acre National Wildlife Refuge is likely to become one of the first sites considered for oil exploration. The East coast, the Florida and Southern California coast are among other locations that are likely to be targeted for offshore oil drilling.

It is unlikely, however, that the coasts of California will be drilled for oil in the near future since there is a ten year moratorium for offshore oil drilling off of most of the California coasts. The California Coastal Commission which has the final say in decisions pertaining to drilling off California's coast is opposed to offshore drilling. Governor Pete Wilson has also shown his opposition to offshore oil drilling in the past. But as the availability of oil decreases, and as future conflicts arise in the Middle East, California's coast will continue to be a prime target for oil corporations in search of more profits.

Water conservation a must for Californians

After five years of below average rainfall, California is facing the worst drought in its history. Most Bay Area residents have been able to avoid severe water rationing in the past due to expectations of "normal" rainy seasons. Unfortunately, each of the past five years have failed to provide a sufficient amount of rain to replenish the nearly empty water reservoirs of our state.

As a result of the continuous drought, Bay Area residents can expect greater restrictions placed on water consumption.

A 30 percent cut in water use among Santa Clara District residents is expected to be enforced by the Santa Clara Valley Water District Board in the near future. By summertime, water cuts may reach 60 percent.

While most Bay Area residents have not yet had to drastically alter the way they use water in their everyday lives, it is important that people begin to make a concerted effort to conserve as much water as possible before major restriction take effect.

Some simple ways to conserve water include the following:

- Install low-flow faucet aerators on all your water faucets
- Avoid leaving your faucets running unnecessarily.
- Limit toilet flushing to once or twice a day if possible.
- Wash your car at a car wash which recycles water, instead of wasting gallons of water washing your car with a hose.
- If you must water your lawn use a timer to avoid over-watering.

There are many other conservation methods besides the ones mentioned above that can help preserve the dwindling water supply of California. While these ideas for conserving water may seem like an inconvenience to some people, the consequences of not making an effort to conserve water will be costly.

The more water that is saved voluntarily, the less California residents will be forced to alter their lives later when the state begins water rationing.

One way or the other water conservation will have to become a way of life for Californians.

And finally...

Recycling center served school and community well

By Martin Schiller
Staff Reporter

What a lot of bad press this week. Articles in the Mercury News, commentary on radio and TV, and news coverage focused on the Jaycees operated recycling center. It has been asked to move so that De Anza can use the space for more parking.

De Anza kicks out the recycling center for another parking lot was the point of most of the commentary. A radio interview with someone from the program said that the center was being forced out because it wasn't a money maker.

While it's understandable that the people who run the program want to fight to keep it going, we shouldn't let it reflect negatively on the college. The negative focus takes attention away from the fact that the recycling center, during its life span, served the community well. It popularized recycling, and focused attention on the resources that we were burying in landfills.

So well did it serve its purpose, that recycling is a fact of life in all of the communities of the South Bay. Legislation was enacted in the face of major opposition from bottlers, to create deposits for beverage containers.

We have recycling centers in most neighborhoods to redeem cans and bottles. Curbside pickups for paper, glass and metals are becoming routine in my neighborhood.

These are all the result of the Jaycees program and others like it around the state and nation. Recycling is one of the few accomplishments of the last decade that will have a lasting and positive effect.

Right now the recycling center at De Anza has lived out its usefulness, and perhaps a bronze plaque might be placed at the site to commemorate the Jaycees for their accomplishments. And we should look forward to their upcoming projects, and hope they will serve just as important a purpose.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Oh, Lord, where shall I begin? Once again it's time for me to stand on my soapbox and try my hardest to persuade the average student to "get off his apathy" and get involved. Instead of hopping on the bandwagon with those who criticize the obvious mistakes in last week's issue of La Voz.

I propose that if anyone out there really cares about the quality of the paper, let them volunteer their time and talents for the betterment of such. Furthermore, I would like to point out that I am optimistic about the future of La Voz, now under the hands of a new editorial board and editor-in-chief. (On the aside, I hope this letter will be printed without spelling errors.)

As I have said before many times, I again invite the students of De Anza to enhance their educational experience here at De Anza by getting involved with any campus activity.

La Voz could obviously use some more staff. So could DASB, ICC, or any club on campus. Student involvement is where it's at, and anyone who says different is missing out on the chance of a lifetime.

I extend my appreciation to the students of La Voz who slave every week to produce something needed, although not always wanted.

What better accomplishment can someone take pride of in their lifetime than to have made an impact on another human beings understanding?

We're all on this little planet together, yet all too often we lose sight of what really matters.

In the lessons of history, one thing is always evident: The people who brought about change were the ones who got involved, not the ones who stayed on the sidelines and heckled the players. Don't deprive yourself of experiences that could fulfill your life, enhance your knowledge of the world, and make you overall more valuable to your fellow mankind. In the immortal words of Jason Freskos, one of my most endeared hecklers, "Do something, swine!"

James J. Franzen

Men lock share of title with win

Lady Dons win, it's a tri-nasty

By Eugene Renteria
Editor in Chief

De Anza's Lady Dons clinched their third Coast Conference title, in as many years, by dominating the Ohlone Renegades with a 76-52 victory. Sophomore Trish Montgomery lead De Anza with 30 points.

"The whole team feels great," said Montgomery about how the team felt after the game.

The Lady Dons came out very pumped up and scored the first ten points of the game. "I think we need to be that way more often," said Montgomery.

Aurora Lamke scored the Renegades first two points. The Lady Don's then out scored Ohlone 16-4 to make the score 26-6 with about ten minutes to play in the first half.

At half time De Anza had a commanding 49-26 lead. In the second half, the Ladies kept defensive pressure on Ohlone by allowing the Renegades to only score 26 more points.

Ohlone's Head Coach Lydia Strong said that De Anza's team has many weapons both on offense and defense. "Shooting, 16 turnovers, intimidation take your pick," said Strong.

Strong said that they do not prepare for an opponent but instead try to make them play their game. "We try to do what we do the best," said Strong.

Ohlone could not do what they wanted to do in both games against the Lady Dons because they lost both games. In the first game Ohlone lost by 37 points.

Kurt Siwek scored on a twisting layup with less than two minutes remaining to spark a 10-0 run as the Dons pulled away and defeated Ohlone 80-67 last night. The win clinched at least a share of the Coast Conference title with Skyline and the Dons (15-2, 25-6) can win the conference outright if they beat Foothill this Friday.

Siwek scored 8 of the Dons first 10 points on his way to a game-high 30 points. Kris Hicks and Andre Collier both had 17.

In the second half, the Renegades closed a 13 point deficit to one with 7:43 left. But Andre Collier hit a 3-pointer that led to 7-0 run putting the Dons up 63-55. Ohlone fought back, pulling to within four points until De Anza ran off 10 straight points to close out the game.

Devils Fall to 0-3

When this intramural basketball season began, all the talk was if the Devils, winners of the last two intramural campaigns, could three-peat. Now the talk is if the Devils will even win a game this season.

The once mighty rulers of the intramural hardwood have fallen far from their lofty perch as they were beaten by Going Vertical 37-35, falling to 0-3 for the season.

In other action, the Ghetto Boys II turned back the Price Club 30-21; the Spurs recovered from their loss of a week ago to beat the Spartans 42-39; and the Staff topped Fast Break from the ranks of the unbeaten by the score of 36-28.

Pacific Division action saw Sports Plus upend the previously unbeaten Jammers 55-54; the Pacific Islanders dominated the DASB Devils 34-20; the Scorpions got back on the winning track with a 31-13 pounding of VSA; and the Ballhandlers outlasted the Iceman 38-29.

P.E.P. 4-0 in Volleyball

The surprise team of the season in the intramural volleyball league this season has to be P.E.P.

After languishing in the cellar in last year's league play, P.E.P. has come on strong with a powerful lineup this time around. P.E.P. destroyed the Sharks 15-1, 15-4 and now stands on top of the standings with a perfect 4-0 record.

In other action, the Guacamole Gang defeated the Slammers 15-5, 15-8; Korean Student Association topped the Volleyballers 15-2, 15-8; VSA got by the Spikers 16-14, 15-9; the DASB Delinquents escaped the S.A.'s 15-13, 16-14; and the Jets beat the Spikers 15-10, 15-11.

Men spikers look for successful year

By Michael Barton
Sports Editor

When De Anza coach Debi Schafer was asked to compare men's and women's volleyball, she said the men's game is more of a hitting and blocking game because they are stronger, taller, and can jump better. The women's game she said, is more finesse, with better passing and defense.

But it was her answer on the different attitudes that was more interesting. "The guys have different egos than the women," Schafer said. "If you don't yell at them, they wonder if you're sick. If I do that with the women, they carry it with them for a month."

Yet, even with hurt feelings, the women have routinely won conference titles, including the last 14 straight. The men are the new kids on the block in their second year as an intercollegiate sport, finishing right behind league champion American River last year.

Even after losing some key players from last year's team, Schafer has four returning sophomores and is excited about the new season. Schafer thinks that this year's team will finish in the league's top three, with American River being the favorite.

"Every day is really refreshing for me as a coach because they're so eager to learn and they play hard for me and they compete."

The Dons will be led by setter Dick Van DerLuit. "I think the team revolves on his maturity and his development which appears to be extremely strong," She said.

Returning outside hitters Ramon Rodriguez and Pepe Delahoz should provide plenty of offensive punch. "They've played a lot of doubles over the summer," Schafer said, "so their overall skills, passing, hitting, blocking, and knowledge of the game is a great improvement."

Defense will be another strong area according Schafer with freshmen Craig Johnson and Ryan Cooling. "They're like vacuums — it's exciting to watch them play," she said.

One question mark about this team that remains to be answered is how well they'll play in the middle. Schafer is looking for freshman Ron Dorsey to hold down the middle but has concerns when the other middle, either Alex Vorbau or John Fairbanks, comes to the net.

"Alex is a big middle guy and he'll get better and better with everyday of practice," she said. "John is a little more controlled than Alex but he is young too."

Much of the Dons success depends on blocking and how they are at hitting and avoiding the blocks. "That's where we're going to win the game — hitting and blocking," Schafer said. "It could be a weakness because it's a hard skill to learn."

Dons spilt

In front of an estimated 50 spectators, De Anza beat the College of the Canyons.

At the beginning of the first game, both teams seemed to be equal opponents but De Anza won 15-10.

The Dons then lost the second game 3-15, but won the third one 15-4. De Anza lost the fourth game 3-15 but was able to win the last and decisive game, that made them the winners, with 15-6.

"We have a well balanced team but a lot of blocking errors need to be corrected," said coach Debi Schafer after the match.

On Sunday, the team went to the West Valley Tourney where they were stopped by the Menlo College in the semi-finals.

Baseball team rebounds

By Gary Russell
Staff Reporter

The De Anza baseball team rebounded from a poor showing in the Delta Tournament two weeks ago to win seven out of nine games last week, including their first conference game.

The Dons swept both games on Thursday against the two teams that had beaten them the previous Sunday.

The first game against Modesto was a complete team effort. The teams' bats woke up to knock in eight runs, three on Adam Noto's home run, and Steve Jarvis hurled a three-hit shutout as De Anza won 8-0.

The second game of the doubleheader didn't see as much scoring as the first, but the pitching was equally effective as Jamie Ybarra gave up only two runs and Bret Hemphill ripped a three-run homer as the Dons won it 3-2 over San Francisco City College.

"Our pitching was good again," said head coach Ritch Price when asked what was different about the last time these teams played, "Jamie and Steve really came through for us, but the big difference was that our bats woke up and were able to produce the kind of numbers we know we're capable of."

Following the doubleheader were three games on Friday in the Modesto Tournament, De Anza winning the first two. The first game was a 4-3 victory over defending conference champions Ohlone College as Mike Wiggins came on in relief to pick up the victory. The second game was a 12-3 rout of Sierra. Paul Maytorna and Eddie Garcia had three hits apiece as Eric Coleman won in relief. De Anza dropped the third game to pesky Modesto 7-4.

On Sunday the Dons blew away Consumes River 12-5 in game one on the strength of another Paul Maytorna three-hit day, with Steve Adler adding three hits of his own as Tony Deale got the win. Game two was a lot closer and added a little drama as the Dons barely squeaked out a 5-4 victory. With two men on base, two outs in the bottom of the seventh (all tournament games are seven innings), Craig Martinez singled to bring both runners, and the win home for De Anza. The third game was a heart-breaking 1-0 loss to troublesome Modesto. The two teams had only three hits combined, and the game's only run was scored on a throwing error.

So after playing eight games in five days, the Dons were more ready to slip into a coma than to play their first conference game against rival Foothill on Tuesday. However, they came through with flying colors as staff ace Ybarra scattered two hits over nine innings to get the win. With the game scoreless in the bottom of the ninth, Jim Lettis lead off the bottom of the ninth with a single to centerfield and then proceeded to steal second and put himself in scoring position. Then with one out, Maytorna nailed a double into the gap to score Lettis and win the ballgame.

L.A. Story is uh like, totally funny

By Deborah Roth
Feature Editor

L.A. Story is a great movie to see if you're in the mood for a fun time that doesn't require a lot of cerebral activity. This mystical-like movie has every L.A. gag possible: shooting on the freeway, the dating scene, gridlock, the trials and tribulations of reserving a table at a trendy restaurant, a brief earthquake, and an absolutely hysterical 4 way stop sign scene.

Steve Martin plays a weatherman who gets fired from his job, and then finds out that his girlfriend has been sleeping with his agent for the last three years. A friendly illuminated freeway condition sign gives Martin advice when his car breaks down nearby and throughout the movie he goes back to get more advice or to ask the sign some pertinent questions. Victoria Tennant plays a British journalist who comes to California to write a story on Los Angeles for the London Times. She is Martin's main love interest while a really annoying L.A. Gear prototype girl named Sandy is his sex playmate.

Some of the lines in the movie are forced, for instance when Steve Martin is getting ready to have sex with a wannabe spokesmodel he stops fondling her and looks down with a puzzled expression "Sandy, your breasts feel weird." "Oh," she says, "That's 'cause they're real."

Shakespeare quotes, both regular and paraphrased are scattered throughout the film. Rick Moranis has a cameo role. He plays a gravedigger in a scene that will have you howling with laughter if you've studied or seen the play Hamlet.

The earthquake scene, handled with nonchalance by the characters in the movie, had the audience I saw the movie with break into applause and shrieks of laughter. No wonder else but California are you going to get that kind of tion.

Little things, like Martin getting into his car to drive a house two houses down, or a scene where 10 people order coffee in as many different ways as possible L.A. restaurant are what makes the movie. One example Steve Martin's hobby in the film of going to museum rollerskating in front of works of art while a friend him. The whole movie has a fantasy-like feel to it, the that spells out advice, cartoon that appear over people heads while they are having sex, a cosmic storm that looks like a plane from taking off, all of that kind of stuff if you're in the right mood for it. While the ending is totally predictable and a little bit corny, L.A. Story is still pretty cute and something to see.

Now you can afford to dream in color.

Apple introduces the Macintosh LC.

If you thought that finding a color Macintosh® system you could afford was just a dream, then the new, affordable Macintosh LC is a dream come true.

The Macintosh LC is rich in color. Unlike many computers that can display only 16 colors at once, the Macintosh LC expands your palette to 256 colors. It also comes with a microphone and new sound-input technology that lets you personalize your work by adding voice or other sounds.

Like every Macintosh computer, the LC is easy to set up and easy to master. And it runs thousands of available applications that all work in the same, consistent way—so once you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. The Macintosh LC even lets you share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to the versatile Apple® SuperDrive™, which can read from and write to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple II floppy disks.

Take a look at the Macintosh LC and see what it gives you. Then pinch yourself. It's better than a dream—it's a Macintosh.

Concert Review

George Carlin cracks up audience

By Deborah Roth
Feature Editor

George Carlin at Flint on Friday night, started off with a bang, and while he didn't finish with exactly a whimper, his ending was kind of weak.

The entire bottom floor and second floor were packed, while the third balcony was empty. The show opened with a half-hour show by comedian Brain Norris, who was very funny. He had a guitar and while most of his jokes had to do with the current political situation in the gulf, he spent much of the time imitating rock groups shouted out by the audience. While the concert was supposed to start at 8, the opening act came on 10 minutes late, and after his show we had a fifteen minute intermission, so it was 9 o'clock when Carlin finally appeared to do his two hour show.

Carlin said he realized he had to do some war jokes and that he was going to get that part of the show over with and then concentrate on some other things. He compared the gulf crisis to a contest that involves penile size and the male ego. He then went on to catalogue life's little embarrassing moments, some of which were burping and bringing up a whiff of a hot dog you had eaten 6 weeks ago, or

"Why is it that the people that are so against abortion are people that you wouldn't want to [have sex with] in the first place?"

Comedian George Carlin

sneezing while going to the bathroom, spitting on someone while you are talking to them, or having someone point out that you have a "enormous bugger" hanging out your nose, and those were the cleanest of the bunch. He spent a long time talking about the planet and the environment. Carlin's philosophy is that the planet has been here long before we were and it's gong to be here long after we are. He said that we (the human race) were pretty arrogant to think that we could harm the planet. He took the mandatory pot shot and Dan Quayle and Marilyn. About half-way through the show Carlin called attention to his NY Giants tee-shirt. He teased the audience about the 49ers vs. Giants game and after a chorus of resounding boos (and few cheers) he told the appreciative audience to have intercourse with itself and went back to his routine.

One of his lines that got the most sustained applause was "Why is it that the people that are so against abortion are people that you wouldn't want to [have sex with] in the first place?"

After cataloging dogs he has owned and a short tirade on "fixing" dogs and cats he ending the show with a five minute list of words that were euphemisms for masturbation. Aside from the distraction of someone who was standing in the wings, and was clearly visible to half the audience during the whole show, the concert was fun.

Art Show Review

De Anza Faculty Art Show was successful

By Susan Ioakem
Staff Reporter

The De Anza Faculty Art Show came to a close last Thursday with much success.

The director of the Euphrat Gallery, Jan Rindfleisch, is pleased that the show was so successful. "I think that the show ran well, it was very well received," said Rindfleisch.

The show provided a dazzling showcase of art work contributed by approximately twenty full and part-time De Anza College art faculty members.

These contributions included paintings, sculpture, photographs, ceramics and mixed media. Even for those who weren't big art fans, there was something there for everyone.

The show opened on January 15 for public exhibition, group tours and Flint Center events.

Two artist presentations were featured, the first of which was a slide show presented by Shirley I. Fisher, who demonstrated her techniques used in creating her series called "Inner Landscapes."

The second presentation featured Michael Cooper's slide show on how he creates his sculptures, machinery and woodworking. One of the outstanding art works displayed in the show was a piece by Monroe Hooder, who made a collage out of lace glove, newspaper and ecclesiastical cards to produce what he called, "Concerto with Hammer, Tack and Violin."

Hillis Williams used a creative concept of making colorful rugs with recycled yarn. The overall turnout of the show was tremendous, and brought in many people.

"It pleased me most to see classes come by to look at the exhibits and hold discussions about them. Some students came in to do projects and write reports on some of the art work that they enjoyed," said Rindfleisch.

The show not only offered people a look at what many De Anza art faculty members took pride in, but offered a new and broad view of what art is really all about.

own recycling area, which opened last November, will help the college in dealing with their own environmental hazards. "We have nothing to do with community service. We have to take care of our own mess, but we do feel obligated to recycle our own material."

Last November A. Robert De Hart, President of De Anza College, allocated $17,000 from district funds to help build a recycling center for De Anza students, faculty and staff members.

"Right now we're recycling colored and white paper along with cardboard," said Doug Cheeseman, Biology instructor and one of the organizers of the center. "We want to do tin, glass and aluminum hopefully in the spring quarter."

Jeff Villepique, recycling coordinator for De Anza, is disappointed in the removal of the Community Recycling Center. "I don't agree with De Anza's decision. The group was fantastic and really helped the community."

Currently the Community Recycling Center is looking for a place to relocate. If you have a site to recommend, call Cupertino Community Services at (408) 255-8033.
